TWELVE DROWN WHEN BOAT

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 8th—12 persons were drowned in a gale which swept Lake Ontario last night, when the George Marsh, a three-masted coal schooner of Belleville, foundered between Mile Point and Pigeon Island. The startling news that came to the telephone late this morning from Bath, where the first of the awful tragedy was received, were fourteen people on the boat and out of that number twelve were drowned, all of whom, so it belonged to Belleville. The survivors were: Capt. S. wife and five children; William Smith, (about 19 years old, a son of the captain, and a Clennan. The Marsh, which was on her way from Oswego to Kingston, was carrying a cargo of coal for Rockwood Island. The schooner foundered at 1 o'clock this morning.

The first news of the terrible tragedy was received when McCartney and Benjamin Wem fishermen from Amherst Island out in their boats several hours to lower their nets, when they came across Mr. McClellan and Smith's son coming in from the scene of the wreck in a small boat. It is stated that the wind was at the rate of thirty-five miles an hour, and that it came up suddenly. Marine men say that of this velocity is a most rare happening for a summer month appears that there were five in the boat in which McClellan and young Smith made their escape that they were lost as they tossed the small craft about with a terrible force. McClellan had his little children clasped in his arms but the little one died from suffocation.

War Summary of The Latest Events

British shipping losses during the past week showed an increase over the previous period reported. The number of ships of over 1,600 tons that fell victims to submarines or mines was twenty-one, an increase of three, while the number under 1,600 tons was two,
which is one less than in the previous report. No fishing vessels were lost, and thirteen merchantmen were unsuccessfully attacked by submarines.
There is no disguising the seriousness of the submarine campaign, but with every week that goes by the Allied measures to offset it improve. In the United States many former German ships are being put into commission, while the shipbuilding programme of Great Britain has exceeded all the hopes and expectations of many who believe that the submarine might actually settle the war. It is also a matter of gratification that the increasing production in Britain will release a number of vessels now used for carrying food supplies for other purposes.
In this connection it is interesting to note that the cereal crop of the United States, with the exception of spring wheat, promises a record, potatoes also promising a record yield.

Berlin is "seeing things at night."
Another raid by the British on the Belgian coast line, in which a few prisoners were captured, is magnified
by the foe into desperate fighting, resulting in the repulse of the British.
The artillery on both sides has been very active to the north of Ypres, and the indications of another new drive by the British are multiplying. Paris reports attempted surprise attacks by the foe north of St. Mihiel and in Upper Alsace as well as some minor engagements on the Aisne front.

A Russian offensive in the Chotin area, near the southeastern frontier of Galicia, unofficially reported, is now confirmed by Petrograd. For the moment it does not seem to be on a very extensive scale, but it has resulted in the capture of an important height, two villages and several hundred prisoners. The scene of the offensive is on the border of the Russian province of Bessarabia and the Austrian province of Galicia. The fighting, according to the Russian report, was severe. Its significance lies more in its promise of better things to come rather than in its immediate achievement. If pressed successfully it would have an important bearing on the campaign farther to the north as well as that on the Russo-Roumanian fighting ground, where Berlin claims that the Teutons have extended their gains north of Fokshani. The fighting in the latter area is of considerable importance. It is probable

in its promise of better things to come rather than in its immediate achievement. If pressed successfully it would have an important bearing on the campaign farther to the north as well as that on the Russo-Roumanian fighting ground, where Berlin claims that the Teutons have extended their gains north of Fokshani. The fighting in the latter area is of considerable importance. It is probable that a strong enemy force has been concentrated against the Allies there, as it is essential to a further continuation of the successes on the entire front that the Russo-Roumanian menace should be wiped out. The Russians, it is reported, have evacuated further important ground on their own side of the border, but no details are available yet. In an engagement on the Kimpolung road several Russian regiments, having run short of ammunition, made a desperate fight with bayonets and stones taken from the sides of the mountain. Though compelled to fall back their resistance is such as to noticeably slow up the Austro-German advance. At the first meeting of the new Russian Government Premier and Minister of War Kerensky urged that the Cabinet concentrate all its energies on national defence and the organization of financial and economic affairs. Disquieting reports are in circulation as to Kerensky's health, which has always been poor, and now bids fair to break down under the terrific strain imposed upon him.

From Palestine comes a British official report of very active trench warfare around Gaza, on the road to Jerusalem, with intense bombardment of the Turkish trenches. It is possible that an early attack is contemplated here by General Allenby's force. The Turks have had plenty of time since the last fight in this neighborhood to strengthen their defences, and have probably received reinforcements and new supplies. There has never been any indication of the strength of the British forces in this area.

In the sudden death on Saturday at Kingston, of Charles H. Corbett, governor of the city and county jail for fifty-two years, the oldest jailer in point of service in Canada has passed away. He was seventy-one years of age, and was recognized as the best jailer in Canada, the government reports showing the jail here to be the best kept in the province. He was a son of Richard Corbett, Napanee, jailer for thirty years, and who died in 1865. The son was appointed jailer on his death.

A little Kingston girl wanted to visit an aunt in Napanee, and so hit on a novel idea, which she carried out to make the trip. Saturday night she went to the G. T. R. station and told a story to the effect that her home was in Napanee. Inspector Jack of the Children's Aid Society was notified. He had to go to Napanee Sunday on other business so took the little girl up with him. Chief of Police Barrett of Napanee got busy and found that although the girl had an aunt in Napanee, her home was in Kingston, within a stone's throw of the police station. Later, the girl confessed that she had been promised a trip to Napanee to see her aunt and took this means to get there. Her parents here were much alarmed at her absence.—Kingston Whig.

BATTLE IS RESUMED.

British Will Keep on Till U-boat Base Is Captured.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Infantry fighting began again in Flanders on Sunday, and in two engagements the Anglo-French troops were victorious.

The weather moderating, Crown Prince Rupprecht, after an all-night bombardment, sent his troops against the British positions at Hollebeke, on the Ypres-Comines Canal between Ypres and Warneton, and, charging forward on both sides of the canal, the Germans gained a footing in the village of Hollebeke. The success was only momentary, however, as the British threw out the Teutons by an immediate counter-attack and took some prisoners. Other German attacks in this area also were checked.

North-west of Bixchoote, which lies to the north of Ypres, the French are following up their successes of last week. In an attack against the German lines Sunday they made further progress.

The resumption of the battle on a great scale is expected. The Germans are hurrying every available man to the danger zone.

According to reliable information which has reached the British headquarters the demoralization in certain Prussian regiments developed with open rebellion. A Bavarian battalion, abandoning the first line trenches near Frezenberg, refused to fight, saying it was useless to sacrifice so many men. The battalion immediately was sent to the rear. The non-commissioned officers leading the movement were arrested and the men were confined.

Although the greatest of the world's battles now raging on the Yser is certain to end in a victory for the Allies, neither headquarters expects it to lead to such an overwhelming defeat as would compel the enemy to sue for peace. It may, however, drive the Prussians out of a large part of the ground they occupy in Belgium and France, stamp out the U-boat menace in its base at Zeebrugge, and pave the way for final victory next year.

NEARING COAL CITY.

British and Canadian Units Advance Towards Lens.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Again Monday the British forces operating against the important coal city of Lens made further advances west and south-west of their objective, according to the British official communication issued Monday evening. The advance on the west was made by two battalions from the Canadian unit. Following up their success of Saturday night, the Canadians captured and consolidated two enemy craters, from which the Germans had been firing hand-grenades at the outpost lines nightly. The British official report for Monday said: "We advanced on lines to-day south-west and west of Lens."

Following up the successful advance on Saturday afternoon in the region of Cite du Moulin, another advance was made Friday night, which carries the Canadian outposts up the main line of the enemy's defence on the railway embankment to the west of Lens. The men of two Canadian battalions, in a dashing attack, captured a crater occupying a crossing road to the east of Cite du Moulin, and a crater to the north, on the Lens-Lievain road, which passes through du Moulin.

KERENSKY IN CONTROL

Has the Confidence of All Russian Parties.

The Only Man Who Can Save the Situation in the New Republic Intends to Be "Boss," and the Commander-in-Chief of the Army Will Allow No Interference.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 7.—The political conference at the winter palace ended at six o'clock Monday morning when each of the five parties represented passed a resolution declaring its confidence in Premier Kerensky and inviting him to form his own Cabinet.

Four of the resolutions declared that a new Cabinet should adhere to the progress of reform and consolidation issued by Premier Kerensky on June 21, but the Constitutional Democrats in their resolution made no mention of the programme, which they continue to oppose.

Premier Kerensky has consented to form another Cabinet.

By a vote of 147 to 46 a joint meeting of the executives of the Workmen's and Soldiers' and Peasants' Councils confirmed the decision of the all-night political conference of continued confidence in Premier Kerensky.

The Maximalists strongly protested and forty-two of the members of this party abstained from voting.

The Duma Committee also has confirmed the vote of confidence in M. Kerensky.

Peace for Russia is inconceivable. Foreign Minister Terestehenko asserted at the political conference, which, lasting throughout Friday night, is described as the most momentous assemblage within the country's history of the past 300 years. Russia must prepare to fight throughout the coming winter, the Foreign Minister asserted, and Alexander Kerensky alone has the nation's confidence.

Gen. D. G. Korniloff, in accepting the position of commander-in-chief of the Russian armies, has telegraphed to Premier and War Minister Kerensky the conditions under which he is willing to take the supreme command.

"First, I wish to be responsible only to my conscience and to the people," says the general.

"Second, no one shall intervene in my fighting orders and appointments.

"Third, the measures adopted during the past few days at the front also shall be applied at the depots

vance was made Friday night, which carries the Canadian outposts up the main line of the enemy's defence on the railway embankment to the west of Lens. The men of two Canadian battalions, in a dashing attack, captured a crater occupying a crossing road to the east of Cite du Moulin, and a crater to the north, on the Lens-Lievins road, which passes through du Moulin.

For several days the enemy had maintained strong posts in these craters, whence harassing rifle-grenade fire was directed at our outposts' line at night. The attack for the most part, was carried out with bombs, the approach in both cases being through a maze of partially destroyed houses, which did not lend themselves to the use of the rifle. When the bombs began to fall the enemy did not stay to fight, it out, but retired towards his main positions, leaving the craters to be incorporated in our advanced lines. An attacking party then advanced to two tunnels known to be occupied by the enemy, and bombed them, inflicting, it is believed, a considerable number of casualties on the enemy.

A break in the clouds has permitted a resumption of the artillery and aerial activity.

Extremists Arrested.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 7.—The Ministry of Justice has ordered the arrest of Leon Trotzky and M. Dunacharsky for the part they played in the uprising here last month. The men are International Socialists and leaders in the Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates.

Leon Trotzky lived in the United States at the outbreak of the revolution, and when its success was known he left for Russia. After some difficulty with the British Government he reached Petrograd. With Nikilai Lenine he led the Maximalists in the disorders in Petrograd in July. Trotzky came to the United States when he was expelled from Europe for preaching peace.

Greek King Crowned.

ATHENS, Aug. 7.—On Saturday King Alexander took the oath of office amid great pomp and ceremony. Preceded by a troop of soldiers, the king, in a carriage drawn by four horses, proceeded from the palace to the hall of the Chamber of Deputies through the street lined with cheering citizens.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the hall rang with cries of "Long live Alexander;" "Long live the constitution," and "Long live Venizelos."

King Alexander then read the speech from the throne on the future attitude of Greece toward the belligerent powers.

20,000 Men Strike.

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Aug. 7.—A strike of railway and street railway employes which has been in progress for several days now, affects 20,000 men, and is seriously threatening the coal mines.

The arrest of Gen. Gurko, former commander of the Russian armies on the south-western front, says a Reuter despatch from Petrograd, took place in the Russian capital and, newspapers there says, was brought about by political charges made against him.

Khvostoff, formerly Minister of the Interior, has been arrested on a charge of appropriating 1,250,000 rubles. It is alleged he intended to use the money in "preparing" for the 1917 elections to the Duma.

ST. JULIEN IS RETAKEN.

British Once More Make Advance in Flanders.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The British have made a further advance in Flanders. Northeast of Ypres the troops of Field Marshal Haig re-established themselves in the town of St. Julien, captured by them on Tuesday, but from which they were driven by the Germans on Wednesday. Additional ground was gained south of Hollebeke, between Ypres and Warrenton, near the centre of the line on which the allied attack was launched early last week. British artillery dispersed German forces preparing to attack near Ypres, and forestalled any attempt by the Teutons to charge against the British lines. On Tuesday, the first day of the Allied advance, 6,122 Germans were made prisoner by the Anglo-French forces.

The statement from British headquarters in France reads:

"In the course of the day our troops again established themselves in St. Julien. North of the Ypres-Roulers railway bodies of German infantry massing for a further counter-attack were broken up by the fire of our artillery, and the enemy was unable to develop his attack. We gained ground during the night south of Hollebeke.

East of Monchy le Preux the enemy has been driven from nearly the whole of the ground gained by him in Thursday night's attack. Hostile raiding parties were repulsed during the night northeast of Gouzeaucourt and south-west of Fontaineles-Croisilles. Parties of our troops successfully raided the enemy trenches south of Lombertzyde.

"The number of German prisoners captured by the Allies in the operations was 6,122, including 132 officers."

Holland to Release U-Boat.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 7.—A semi-official statement received here from Berlin, says that as a result of an investigation by the international commission at The Hague the German submarine U-boat 6 will remain interned in Holland and the U-30 will be released.

The German submarine U-30 stranded on the Dutch island of Walcheren last February. It was disarmed and interned at Flushing.

There are no available records concerning the U-boat 6.

Many Planes Brought Down.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—According to the official communiques 420 aeroplanes were lost on the western front in July. The Times admits that the figures are inexact, owing to the variations in French and German methods of announcement. Four hundred and twenty is the third highest total of the war, compared with 392 in June, 713 in May, and 717 in April. Of the 420 no less than 291 were German and 129 Allies (89 British). It is right to say the British figures of 89 are probably incomplete. Of the German 291 the British bagged 247, the French 35, and the Belgians 9. This is a Belgian record.

Governor Shot to Death.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 7.—General Erdelli, military governor of Petrograd, says the Bourse Gasetter, has been killed. He was treacherously shot in the back.

General Erdelli, a despatch from Petrograd on July 25 announced, had been appointed military governor of Petrograd in succession to General Polovtseff, who had resigned after failing to put down rioting in the Russian capital. General Erdelli had been commander of the eleventh army.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Plans for taking over for operation all American ocean-going merchant ships soon will be announced by the Shipping Board. Charters will be requisitioned under a recent act of Congress, authorizing the President to commandeer tonnage for Government uses.

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Nashville, Tenn.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was three years coming and gave me medicine for it until I was called away from the city for some time. Of course I could not go to him then, so my sister-in-law told me that she thought Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would cure it. It helped both the Change of Life and the tumor and when I got home I did not need the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was cured. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it."

—Mrs. E. H. BEAN, 625 Joseph Avenue, Nashville, Tenn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a pure remedy containing the extractive properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, meets the needs of woman's system at this critical period of her life. Try it.

If there is any symptom in your case which puzzles you, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

How Jap Gets Names.

One of the strangest of the many quaint customs of the Japanese handed down from generation to generation is that of the christening ceremony. When one month old a child gets its first name with ceremonial. Trumpets are blown and the child is borne in great state to the family temple, and behind the procession march the household servants carrying the infant's wardrobe. The servant in the rear of the procession bears a huge box in which is the priest's fee, together with three slips of paper on which three names are written. On reaching the temple the names are thrown into the air, and the first that touches the ground is the one which the child receives.

When three years old the child is again christened, accompanied by elaborate religious rites. At 15 his education is supposed to be finished, and as he then enters manhood he is again christened.

When he takes to business he receives his "business" name, by which he is known in the commercial world, and upon every upward step in life he receives a new name. At his marriage his name is altered again, and the last and only permanent one is that given him after death, which is written on his tomb.

AN UNHAPPY CITY.

Storm of War Again Rages About Ancient Soissons.

Soissons, one of the many unfortunate cities of northern France around which the varying fortunes of the French and German armies have eddied and flowed since the first days of the war, is again in the zone of the bombardment. Although it remained untouched when the Germans made their first sweep through northern France, advancing to the Marne, Soissons was sorely buffeted in the bombardment which accompanied the battle of the Aisne, and was further damaged during the week's battle of Soissons at the end of which the French were forced to retire across the Aisne at a point to the east of the city, in January, 1915.

Bombardments, sieges, and pillagings are part and parcel of Soissons' history. Indeed, few cities in Europe possessing as little strategic significance as this place have suffered as greatly in war. In early Roman days the place was known as Noviodunum, chief town of the Suessones. Here the last of the Roman governors of Gaul, Syragrinus, was defeated toward the close of the fifth century by Clovis, the Frank. And in this city, which witnessed his triumph over the foreign foe, Clovis was wedded to Clotilda, she about whom so many romantic legends have been woven and who finally prevailed upon her husband to renounce paganism and embrace Christianity. Long before this notable event, however, Soissons had become an important place in the chronicles of the Christian faith, for it was here in 297 that the famous shoemaker nobles, the brothers Crispin and Crispianian, suffered martyrdom.

Among the many stories told of the trials and triumphs of these two apostles is one which relates that the Roman prefect Rictiovarus commanded that they be cast into a caldron of boiling tar. The brothers emerged unscathed and refreshed after the bath, much after the manner of their Jewish forerunners, Shadrach, Meshech, and Abednego, from the fiery furnace in Babylon. Rictiovarus, upon witnessing this miracle, cast himself into the caldron and was consumed. But the martyrs were subsequently beheaded and their remains rested for a time in the city of their execution.

Across the Aisne from Soissons is the suburb of St. Medard, famous for its celebrated abbey which was one of the wealthiest and most influential in all France during the Middle Ages. It was in this institution that the Roman Emperor, Louis the Pious, was held a prisoner by his own sons in the ninth century, and here also Abelard, the great teacher, was confined for a time after the tragic denouement of the Heloise romance.

Soissons was the rallying point for Napoleon's shattered army after the battle of Waterloo. During the war of 1870 the town capitulated to the Germans after a three days' bombardment. Only a few years ago a monument was erected in a public square of the city to the memory of those citizens whom the Teuton invaders shot.

At the time of the outbreak of the world war Soissons had a population of 15,000. Its chief industries were iron, and copper foundries, boiler factories, and the manufacture of agricultural implements, straw hats, and glass. Its grain market was important and it was famous for

HARD TO GET THERE.

Tourists Find It Difficult to Enter Biblical City of Jaffa.

Jaffa is a historical old biblical city immensed in a common-place present of uncleanness, congestion, petty commerce, and fearful and wonderful Turkish officialdom. Practically all travelers in the Levant and Palestine sightseers pass through Jaffa, for it is the port of Jerusalem, where one lands if anything by boat from Greece or Egypt, and few such travelers carry away any notably pleasant impressions from the city by the sea.

Very often you are lucky to land in Jaffa at all. The port authorities may have laid a quarantine against goods or passengers embarked from Alexandria—this happens not infrequently—and in such case you must voyage up and down the coast of Palestine until the quarantine flag is lowered.

Or else the seas may be too high for your boat to make a landing, and continue so until the patience or the authority of the captain is exhausted, in which case you will also get a longer sea voyage than you bargained for. If the elements and the health authorities are both in favorable mood at the same time you can land in the old city that flourished in the days of Solomon.

The quarantine regulations may give you the impression that Jaffa is run on sanitary principles, but the city itself quickly dispels your illusions. Apparently the local government is stricter about imported danger of disease than the homegrown variety. Jaffa is no worse than any other Levantine port, neither is it noticeably better.

Few travelers stay any great while in Jaffa, and as a result accommodations are of the sketchiest. You may find yourself in an Asiatic hotel, in a monastery, or in the house of some hospitable European if there are an unusual number of strangers in the city. The shortness of your stay is no matter for great regret.

Jaffa to-day is a city almost purely commercial. You carry away an impression of narrow and twisting streets badly in need of a corps of white wings, of mean houses, and an occasional imposing mosque; of a population at once madly energetic in trade and constitutionally fatalistic, at the same time shrewd, avaricious and good natured.

A Famous Russian Clown.

There recently passed away a man named Anatole Durov, who was at one period in great favor as a clown. Durov held that, whatever one's vocation, the only thing that brings success is work. Accordingly, he became the most industrious, successful, and beloved clown in Russia, and probably the richest clown in the world too, for when he died he left a large fortune and a collection of trained animals that brought visitors to his home from all parts of the world.

Born of an ancient and noble family, he was a pupil of the renowned Cadet Corps, but before his graduation he ran away and joined a circus.

But he had no ambition to be an ordinary clown. He kept in touch with politics, with everything that took place in Russia, and applied it to his wit. Soon he became an unlicensed censor of Russian society in motley. Evil he rebuked by jest and gibe. No man was in too high a place for his tongue, and furious officials once brought about his exile.

He was a very famous animal trainer. The pig was his favorite pupil, and it is said that his pigs could do almost everything that human beings can do except talk.

A team of trained pigs drew him about the streets, and so did he love them that a pig's head with a "D" to the left, was the device upon his seal.

He used to enjoy telling how, when he was on tour in Germany, one of his pigs ran away and came finally to a farm not far from Berlin. The farmer gave the tired-looking beast food and drink. To his consternation, the visitor solemnly mounted an unturned barrel, looked gratefully at its host, and stood on its head as a token of appreciation.

OUR CANNED GOODS NEEDED.

Canadian Trade Commissioner Directs Attention to Good Market.

Mr. Harrison Watson, Canadian Trade Commissioner, London, in his latest report says:

"It seems a favorable opportunity for again directing attention to the excellent prospects which should await the coming season's pack of Canadian canned fruits and vegetables in this market.

"While it is true that ordinary commercial transactions are substantially reduced by existing import restrictions, upon the other hand the virtual prohibition of sources of supply outside of the British Empire for at least a considerable proportion of the year obviously gives an enormous advantage to Canadian goods, while the avowed policy of the Government departments and that important body, the Army Canteen Committee (which now purchases on behalf of some 2,000 canteens) to give all possible preference to the products of the Empire, offers opportunities of which it is hoped Canadian packers will take the full advantage of which they were so unfortunately deprived last summer owing to the indifferent yield of so many vegetables and fruits.

"The big demand for Canadian canned tomatoes, peas, and pears has resulted from the dislocation of ordinary sources of supply affected by the war, while owing largely to the presence of the Canadian Expeditionary Force and their families a demand has been created for goods previously very little used in this country, such as baked beans and sugar corn.

"Many of the principal canned goods importers in London and elsewhere have already been in touch with some of the Canadian packers of canned fruits and vegetables, but the frequent additional inquiries that come in betoken the increased interest which is being evinced in Canada as a source of supply, and while ordinary business transactions are temporarily limited by the difficulties of transportation in addition to import restrictions, Canadian packers, with proper foresight and organization, should be able to secure, and in certain lines permanently retain, trade which was previously done with other countries."

English Novelist With Our Forces

CONINGSBY DAWSON, English novelist, resident in the United States, was busy trying to follow up the success of his novel, "A Garden Without Walls," when the war came. He realized that, as he was a Briton of my age, it was his duty to put pen behind him and fight for his country. Delaying only long enough to finish some work which he promised his publishers, he sailed from the United States into Canada and qualified as an officer in the Canadian forces. Shipped across the ocean last summer, he found himself after only a short stay in England plunged without further ado into the hell on the Somme.

For months thereafter he dealt with the death from morning to night, with scarcely the time to get a good wash or change of clothes. He saw men killed a few feet from him; saw corpses by the red lining in hideously lifelike poses amid the black mud of shell holes; and, faithful to his professional writer, he fought with the full force of his intellect to grasp and write and set down on paper the impact of new and horrible sensations which the war brought him. He could not do it—what—but Coningsby Dawson, novelist, as given us something better in a novel in his latest volume, "You On," made up of letters from trenches to members of his family on this side of the Atlantic.

His new book is one of the most stirring productions of the subject of war that has yet appeared. He makes you see the reactions of a war of a civilian in uniform, accustomed to the ease of life, as he is abruptly plunged into carnage and barbarism and stench. War will never again pass an unexamined examination," is one of the themes, one of many, that flash the horror to his readers.

Coningsby Dawson sailed for Europe last July. "I've become a little again in God's hands," he writes to his family after months of being in a Canadian camp, "with confidence in His love and wisdom and a growing trust that what He decides for me will be the kindest." A short time later he was in Northern France.

In preparation for the coolness of the engaged in the deadly work, Coningsby overcame the young novelist's grew to know his comrades. "If unconscious heroism is the true most to be desired," he writes to his father last September, "heroism spiced with a strong of humor at that, then pretty every man I have met out has the amazing guts to wear down of thorns as though it a cap-and-bells." And, in the letter, he gave this description of himself under fire:

"I dare say you'll wonder how it is to be under shell fire. This is it, feels—you don't realize your until you come to think about it—ward—at the time it's like a coconut shies at a coconut's—only you're the coconut's head. It takes too much interest in the of dodging to be afraid."

crops and of wheat sown on stubble. It is estimated from the reports of correspondents that the total area sown to wheat for 1917 is 13,450,250 acres, as compared with 14,897,000 acres, the area sown, and with 12,900,600, the area harvested in 1916. Thus the area sown this year, whilst nearly ten per cent. less than the area sown for 1916, is about four per cent. more than the area harvested for 1916. In arriving at these figures revised returns of the census of 1916 have been included for Manitoba; for Saskatchewan and Alberta similar provisions have not yet been completed. As compared with the areas sown for 1916, the returns this year indicate small increases under wheat in each of the Atlantic Provinces and in British Columbia, and an increase of 25,000 acres in Quebec; but for each of the remaining Provinces decreases are reported to the extent of 154,000 acres in Ontario, 254,000 acres in Manitoba, 927,000 acres in Saskatchewan, and 158,000 acres in Alberta.

The average condition on May 31 in percentage of the standard representing a full crop is for all wheat for Canada, 84 per cent., as compared with 90 per cent. on May 31 last year, and with 91 per cent. the average condition on the corresponding date for the seven years ending 1916.

The decrease in the area sown to wheat this year is partly due to the curtailment of the seeding season by the lateness of the spring, and efforts were therefore apparently directed towards an increase in the areas sown to other crops. For oats, the acreage is 11,781,900 acres as compared with 11,378,346 acres, the area sown, and 9,875,346 acres, the area harvested last year. Barley is sown on 1,954,000 acres, as against 1,827,780 acres, the area sown, and 1,681,180 acres, the area harvested in 1916. Rye has a sown area of 159,470 acres, as compared with 147,170 acres in 1916; peas, 152,465 acres, compared with 159,680 acres; mixed grains, 558,250 acres, as compared with 410,726 acres; hay and clover, 7,661,800 acres, against 7,892,932 acres; and alfalfa, 84,900 acres, against 89,472 acres.

Athletes Abroad.

That Toronto's athletes now serving their country overseas are still able to hold their own with the best cracks in the world has once more been demonstrated when an all-Toronto relay team composed of Jack Tressider, the Central half-mile Canadian champion runner; Charlie Kelly, walker and sprinter of Central Y.; Captain Harold Campbell, the Varsity mile champion, and Hec Phillips, of West End Y., whipped the cream of the allied army athletes in a mile relay race at a monster military athletic tournament held at Stamford Bridge, London, England. Toronto khaki athletes beat champions drawn from the Italian, French, Belgium, Russian, Australian, and New Zealand armies fighting on the western front. The Canadians' victory was a smashing one. There were ten teams in the race. The Toronto champions won their heat handsily in the fastest time, and then cleaned up the final by forty yards, racing the distance in three minutes and thirty-five seconds, each man doing a quarter mile.

In the first relay Jack Tressider handed J. Donaldson, the professional champion sprinter of Australia and world's record holder of 130 and 150 yards' records, a beating. Tressider raced with the Anzac's cham-

WARFARE'S ACTIVITIES

RAILROAD MEN WORKING ON THE BELGIAN FRONT.

A Correspondent Tells of How the Soldiers Who Put Down Lines of Track Contribute to the Chances of Victory—A Visit to the Messines Area.

THE Canadians played a worthy part in the great events occurring on the Belgian front, where in the early stages of the war the men from the Dominion made history that will never be forgotten. The ground that is now in process of redemption represents for them the unattainable. They contested every foot of the St. Eloi area at the northern end of the battlefield with the utmost tenacity and valor, but by the superior German artillery on Messines-Wytschate Ridge all their efforts were made fruitless, and thousands of Canadians died in opposing a further German advance. Their sacrifice was not made in vain. The ridge and a daily increasing part of the plain of Flanders beyond it are again in the possession of the Belgian people, while the enemy, brutal and sullen, as always in defeat, shells with long-range guns the villages in the area from which he has been driven, in the hope of preventing the reoccupation of what, in most cases, are mounds of shapeless ruin, like those of the Somme and Arras regions.

In driving out the invader, the Canadians have done notable work, not on the fighting front, but in the engineering, road-building, and railway construction department. Some of the mines which have so utterly changed the outline of the ridge were completed before the Canadians left for the Somme last fall. For months thousands of Canadians, manned and officered by former railway contractors and engineers, have been adding to the mileage of the light railways in the Ypres salient. Recently, during a brief visit to the Belgian front, a correspondent watched a railway construction battalion; which was recruited in Northern Ontario, pushing forward a light railway to a town on the new British front. The work of grading and track-laying was proceeding under fire from the enemy's heavy artillery. Casualties were inevitable, but the men worked with a will, knowing that by their labors the feeding of the guns is made possible.

There are now over one hundred miles of light railway in the second army area, some of it double-tracked. The Colonel in charge of the work of extending the line to the new front was formerly a contractor for the construction of part of the National Transcontinental, and is accustomed to handling men in thousands, as he has to do on the rush job now in hand. With little military training, his men work like veterans. Until lately, building railways in a salient was most perilous. Now the track, when put down, has a fair chance of staying where it is put.

The Canadian surgeons and nurses in the Canadian casualties clearing station in the salient were as effective in caring for the wounded from the battlefield of Messines as the railway builders were in providing facilities for feeding the guns. Over several thousand square miles larger than the island of Cuba and approximates the size of Louisiana, with a population equal to that of Virginia. Of its sister republics, Nicaragua embraces slightly more territory, but has less than one-third the population.

The total available unorganized military strength of Guatemala is 338,000 men, which is three-fourths as large as all the rest of Central America combined.

Guatemala has seventy miles of coast line on the Atlantic seaboard and 260 miles on the Pacific, the best harbor, Puerto Barrios, being on the Atlantic, with regular steamship service to New York and New Orleans.

The fact that Guatemala was the first of the Central American republics to align itself with the United States came as something of a surprise in view of the fact that the country's industrial and commercial life had been permeated by German influence before the war. It was German capital which had built much of the 502 miles of railway in the republic, and it was Germany which used to buy a large percentage of the coffee produced on the Guatemalan plantations, many of which were either owned or managed by Germans. One of the leading educational institutions of the country is a German school endowed by the German Government. German cotton goods occupied an important place in the country's imports before the world-war restricted shipping.

While coffee is Guatemala's chief article of export, the country also produces hides, rubber, bananas, sugar, and chicle, the leading customers now being the United States and Great Britain.

The capital of the republic, Guatemala City, a well-lighted, modern town of 90,000 inhabitants, five-sixth of whom are of European origin, is situated 85 miles from the Pacific coast on a plateau nearly 5,000 feet above sea level.

Estrada Cabrera, president of Guatemala, has been the chief executive of the country for 19 years and only a few weeks ago began another term of six years.

Germany and Japan.

Undiscouraged by the mitten, Germany continues to woo Japan. The triple alliance of Japan, Mexico, and Germany against the United States which Zimmermann proposed did not seem to suit Japan's taste, so now Admiral von Hintze, who was Germany's Minister to China until China broke off relations, tries her with another. He stops off at Yokohama on his way home and proposes an alliance of Japan, Germany and Russia, evidently counting on the success of the reactionary movement in the last-named country to restore the Russian throne with a German puppet on it. The dispatch says:

"An eventual alliance between Germany and Japan that would secure for all time the rights of the two countries in the Far East was forecast, by Admiral von Hintze, formerly German Minister to China, in an interview with a reporter of the Kokumin Shimbun. The German Admiral added his belief that after Russia would come into the agreement, and thus form a powerful triple alliance that would exercise a predominating sway over the two hemispheres and insure a world peace."

Germany cannot give up the habit of partitioning the future. All her schemes lately have been aimed at the United States, the von Hintze

CLOTHING FOR DESTITUTE FRENCH WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Coming in from the re-conquered districts, and appealing to the small French hospitals for relief, should receive all the assistance we can send them, for surely the French have fought valiantly from the beginning, and the French women have made great and wonderful sacrifices in the cause of the liberty and freedom of the world for which we are all contending.

Shall not we then, who are fortunately far removed from the horrors attendant upon the advance of an invading army, and the terrible destitution and devastation resulting therefrom, do all in our power to assist those in such dire need.

The call therefore, is for more clothing of all kinds to send to these poor people, men's and boys clothing is also required, as there are old men and boys among these refugees, for all Frenchmen of military age are serving their country in some capacity. However, the French soldier returning from hospital is badly in need of under wear and socks, as his Government makes no regular issue of these articles, as is done for our men. Instead many a French convalescent soldier returns to the trenches with only a pair of trousers and a tunic.

It is therefore, most desirable that whatever clothing is to be donated, should be sent in to our work-room at once, so that it may reach the distribution points in France when Autumn winds begin to blow.

We are pleased to have been the means of placing the opportunity within the reach of so many women of hearing the message sent forth to the women of Ontario, by the Government, both Provincial and Dominion; and entrusted to Mrs. Willoughby Cummings, D.C.L., who spoke very emphatically and convincingly to a representative assembly on Monday afternoon at the charming residence of Mrs. J. G. Daly, to whom we are much indebted for her kind assistance.

Mrs. Cummings brought with her, and placed before the meeting, a very comprehensive Resolution, embodying many of the vital questions now before the Canadian people, and which has been endorsed by all the leading women's societies. The Resolution was accepted by the meeting and the decision arrived at that it should be forwarded with as little delay as possible to both the Leader of the Government and the Leader of the Opposition, which has been done by the "U.E. Loyalist" Chapter of the Daughters of the Empire.

Remember our room is only open once a week, on Thursday afternoons during the hot weather, for a work-meeting, for the return of work taken out, and obtaining fresh material, therefore, please make an effort to be present on Thursday afternoons.

WHAT WILL BE THE OUTCOME OF WOMAN'S VOTE

Every intelligent person in Ontario is on the qui vive as to the result of woman's vote in the Province.

What may be expected, when it has had time to take on a distinctive character, was expressed by G. W. Russell, chairman of the Board of Governors of Canterbury College, New Zealand, where women have had the vote for over two decades, who once wrote:

"Prior to woman's franchise, the distinctive feature of our policies was finance. Legislative proposals were entirely from the point of view (1) what would it cost! (2) what would be their effect from a commercial standpoint? The woman's view is not pounds or pence, but her home, her family. In order to win her vote the politicians had to look at matters from her point of view. Her ideal was not mere money, but happy homes and a fair chance in life for her husband, her intended husband, and her present or prospective family.

WONDERFUL STUFF! LIFT OUT YOUR C

Apply a few drops then lift off calluses off with fingers—no pain.

No humbug! Any corn, whether soft or between the toes, will right up and lift out, without a trace of pain or soreness.

This drug is called freezone a compound of ether discovered by a cinnati man.

Ask at any drug store for a bottle of freezone, which will be a trifle, but is sufficient to rid feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly on tender, aching corn or callus. In the soreness disappears and shoe corn or callus will loosen and lifted off with the fingers.

This drug freezone doesn't eat corns or calluses but shrivels them out even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no smarting when applying afterwards. If your druggist doesn't have him order it for you.

FOR SAFETY OF TI

Greater protection for pedestrians is provided in the recent amendments to the Ontario Motor Vehicle Act, copies of which have been received by the local police.

The amendments have been also with a view to avoid accidents. And not only is the trians safeguarded, but the motorist is furnished with additional guards that will make driving him freer from danger and accidents.

Under a certain section, it is provided that any person, under the age of sixteen years, to drive a car on the public highway. This amendment was made because of many accidents that have occurred, in persons under that age were forbidden from driving. The same section provides that any person between the ages of sixteen and eighteen shall not drive a car unless a parent or guardian has first been notified of the person furnished with a car.

Section 9, subsection 4, makes it an offense to use glaring headlights on the public highway.

The wording is that "no light over four-candle power, equipped with a reflector, unless the same be designed, deflected or arranged to project the beam of light at an angle less than seventy-five feet or more shall rise above forty-two inches above the surface of the highway" shall be used.

No spot or revolving light matter what candle power or range can be used on a car. They were usually attached to the front shield.

Both front lights must be on before dusk and dawn. Formerly, light was all that was required and motorist did not care to light.

When motors of other vehicles at any street intersection, the right of way has the right-of-way over the other. Section 10 provides that any by-laws passed by a municipality, corporation or police commission with respect to regulating motor vehicles, that are found to be in conflict with the sections of the province must be deemed inoperative and repealed.

A Car of Proven Quality

THE Ford car has been on the market twelve years, surely long enough to have proven its high quality. There is nothing experimental about it. Every part has stood the test of time and proven its stability with hard service. No other car has ever approached the durability records of the Ford.

No matter what price you pay for a car you cannot get one with a stancher chassis. Government laboratory tests have shown that the different parts of the Ford car are superior to those in any other car. Ford Vanadium steel has never been equaled in strength.

If you want a car that can plow through deep mud, sand and gravel—that can cross fields, corduroy roads and ford streams—that can climb the steepest hills with ease—that will give the greatest mileage all year round with the least expense and care—then there is only ONE car for you—The Ford.

LAURIER DENIES HE HAS GIVEN UP RIGHT TO LEAD

Answers Sir Clifford Sifton—Has Never Considered Legislation from Standpoint of One Province—Considers Canada as a Whole Without Regard to Race or Creed.

Ottawa, Aug. 2.—Ninety-eight degrees in the shade, outside and ninty in the chambers was the temperature under which legislators undertook the business Wednesday afternoon.

It is seldom that Sir Wilfrid Laurier ever rises to a question of priviledge. Yesterday in the torrid heat he did so.

"Mr. Speaker," he said. "The House knows how very seldom I ever rise in this House to call attention to any reference made to myself either inside or outside this House. I crave the consent of the House, however, to rise and make some reference to a report appearing in the Toronto Globe.
I find in this paper a report of a speech delivered by Sir Clifford Sifton at Winnipeg. In this speech Sir Clifford declared that no fault could be found with the stand and attitude taken by Laurier since the beginning of the war until recently. His attitude taken on conscription, however, had changed matters. Through the attitude then taken, Laurier had abro-grated his title to leadership.

"My attitude," said Sir Wilfrid Laurier, "was attributed by Sir Clifford Sifton to a desire to play solidly to Quebec. Sir Clifford informed his audience that if Laurier were to win
the coming election it would mean that Canada would forthwith go out of the war.

"Even I have to say," continued
Sir Wilfrid, "that from nothing which I have said either outside or inside
this chamber at any time could Sir Clifford Sifton draw such an inference as he has drawn. At no time in my career have I ever considered legislation from the standpoint of one province throughout all my public life.
I have considered Canada as a whole,
and have always adhered to Liberal national principles, without regard to race or creed, but for the general good of all. My attitude to-day, on the first of August, is the same as it was in August of 1914, when the war commenced. I am in the war to the end, not on a basis of compulsion, but on a basis of the voluntary system."

KEEP SOME OF CANADA.

(Simcoe Reformer)

Yet, the war Liberals want to go on with the war all right. They want it won. They place its winning ahead of anything else. But only a few of them have taken leave of their senses.
Most war Liberals want to see some-over. They are not going to help Sir Robert Borden give it all away to Sir Joseph Wesley Flavelle and others of his kidney.

his death after having travelled thou-

Pte. Galloway was a Toronto boy who enlisted in the famous 22nd Battery which mobilized here and after training at Tete de Pont Barracks went overseas. During the time the battery was in Kingston Pte. Galloway met Miss Villard and the two became great friends. When he went overseas the friendship was kept up by writing. He was severely wounded some time ago and his return to Canada was ordered. With the party of returned men which arrived here early Monday morning he left Halifax. Before Point Lewis was reached he took a turn for the worse and passed away.
His body was taken from the train at Montreal and the remains interred there.

His will which was made before leaving for France stated that the entire estate was to be left to his girl friend. The estate consists of $37,000 in negotiable securities and two sections of land now under cultivation in the north-west together with a herd of over 1,000 sheep.

If Pte. Galloway had have lived he would throughout his life have re-

the decorations which he received for his gallant work. He wore the Vic-

Two superannuated judges appointed to clear Bob Rogers of certain charges that a Manitoba judge, form-guilty of having performed the duty assigned to them. He is now as pure

two aged gentlemen. Meanwhile, Kel-

what the country thinks, mix: no

AIM OF LIBERAL EDITORS.

(Toronto Globe.)

The Toronto News talks about Ontario editors "intriguing against the Prime Minister," as if they ought to be his obedient followers. They are not of the following kind. They will support Sir Robert Borden in regard to conscription and all other war measures. Their resolution makes that plain. But it does not follow that they agree with him in juggling with the taxation of wealth, or in white-washing the Hon. Robert Rogers. The income tax measure is a fraud on the electors. It is intended to cover up the Government's abject surrender to the profiteers. The independent Journals, the independent members of Parliament, the independent electors of Canada will not stand for that.
They will insist on conscription of wealth. They want incomes taxed, but they also want to see the profits
of the profiteers cut to the bone.
They have no confidence in Sir Robert Borden in that respect. They believe that he has surrendered to the profiteers, and will not tax them unless he is compelled to do so by the overwhelming force of public opinion as shown in the coming election.

HONOR FEARLESS EDITOR.

John R. Rathon, of Providence Journal, Exposed German Plots.

John R. Rathon, editor and publisher of the now celebrated Providence Journal, has been entertained as the honored guest of the City of Toronto, where Canadians showered honors on this friend of the Allies and his charming wife. Mr. Rathon has, through the agency of his paper, done more than any one man to defeat the plots of the German conspirators and spies in the United States. Possessed of an organization, the secret of which has never been told, he was enabled to keep in close touch with the German Embassy and Consulates. He knew almost everything as soon as planned, and published the details in full before the plots materialized in many cases. In some cases he was able to warn the Government in time to defeat the purpose of the German spies. In others he was able to publish information following fires and explosions, which led to the arrest of those directly responsible. It is estimated that the revelations of The Providence Journal were the basis for about three-quarters of the proceedings of the United States Government against the plotters.

Some of the sensational revelations in the long series since the war began includes the following:

Exposure of the Sayville wireless station, resulting in its seizure by the Government.

Exposure of the German Embassy's guilty knowledge in the Lusitania's fate.

Exposure of the attempt to bribe Samuel Gompers, the Labor leader, to influence the laboring element of the United States against the Allies, and hinder munition making.

Exposure of Boy-Ed and von Papen, the German agents attached to the German Embassy, leading to their removal from the United States.

Publication of the conversations between Ambassador Dumba and ex-Secretary Bryan.

Exposure of the plotting of von Igel, Dernberg, and von der Goltz, who were sent out of the country.

The plot to blow up the Welland Canal.

The German activities against the United States in Mexico.

Exposure of Zimmerman's plot to embroil Mexico and Japan with the United States.

Exposure of the plan to destroy the German ships interned in New York harbor.

The prophecy of the destruction of the Parliament Buildings at Ottawa by fire.

Exposure of the manner in which Ontario nickel found its way to Germany from the United States.

One of the big results of the enterprise and courage of the Providence Journal, which has rendered it famous throughout the world, was the entry of the United States into the war with a whole heart, and the consequent departure of the arch-plotter, Count Johann von Bernsdorf, former German Ambassador at Washington.

GETTING AHEAD.

Are You Giving the Last Man on the Job a Chance to Pass You?

Don't laugh at that green, ungainly looking but hardworking and always on the job fellow who has joined your force. In a few years you may be asking him for a job.

CONSERVING OUR FOOD

NEW FOOD CONTROLLER MAKES MANY PLANS.

Under the Organization Outlined by Hon. W. J. Hanna Every Department of Life Where Food Can Be Saved Will Be Looked After With Great Care.

THE collective food experience of the Dominion is to be employed to solve the food problem and secure essential food supplies for Great Britain and the Allied armies and nations. There is to be the closest possible co-operation between the food controller's office, the Federal and Provincial Governments, and national and local organizations of a public character.

The basis of organization of the food controller's office provides for the creation of six departments to deal with various phases of the food problem.

There will be a central advisory committee composed of representatives of the Government, the churches, labor organizations, educational departments and institutions, urban interests, farmers, rural municipalities, and men's and women's organizations. This central body will advise the departments through the food controller.

Provincial machinery is to be established through the creation of special provincial committees to advise upon plans prepared by the departments and approved by the food controller. Each provincial committee will include in its personnel representatives of the Government, of the churches, of the schools, of the farmers, of labor, of urban and rural districts, and of men's and women's associations. In addition, special committees, representing producers, manufacturers, handlers, and consumers of food products, will be appointed to investigate and formulate plans for action on individual problems dealt with by the departments. Action has already been taken in this regard by the creation of the food consumption control committee and the fish committee.

The interior organizations of the food controller's office will include:

Food saving department.
Food industries department.
Food distribution department.
Information and statistics department.

Business and office department.
Educational department.

The food saving department will deal with such problems as—

(a) Consumption in public eating places, etc.

(b) Instruction in methods of conservation in private houses.

(c) Instruction in preservation of perishable products.

(d) Instruction in substitution of foods to take the place of those required for export.

(e) Securing the co-operation of national, provincial, and local organizations.

The food industries department will have charge of—

(a) Matters relating to flour, bread, meat, fish, dairy products, canned and all manufactured food.

(b) Preparation of certain foods in order to encourage their use and to insure plentiful supplies.

Strange Prophecy 300 Years C

PART of an extraordinary prophecy made by Johannes in the year 1618 is quoted in a recent issue of The Figaro. In deciphering the allegory, it must be recognized that:

France is represented by a Lion;
England by a Leopard;
Russia by a White Eagle;
Germany by a Black Eagle;
Austria by the "other Eagle";
while the Lamb stands for Mercy, and Truth.

"Towards the year 2000 Christ will manifest himself in an army which will surpass in number that can be imagined.

"There will be Christian legions; and there will be hamlets and savage soldiers the defenders of the Lamb.

"For the first time the Lamb will be all red. There will not be a spot in the Christian world not be red, and red will be the Earth, the Water, the Air, for blood will be the domains of the four elements.

"The Black Eagle will take itself on the Cock, who will be feathers, but will strike basely with his spurs. He will be crushed were it not for the Leopard and his claws.

"The Black Eagle will take the country of Luther, will take the Cock from another side invade the country of the Cock in the middle of it.

"The White Eagle, coming from the North, will surprise the Black Eagle and the 'other Eagle', invade the country of the Cock from one end to another.

"The Black Eagle will be forced to liberate the Cock to fight the White Eagle. The Cock will pursue the Black Eagle into the country of the Lion help the White Eagle.

"The battles fought up will be as nothing compared with which will take place in the year of Luther, for the seven A together pour in the fire censers on the impious Eagle signifies that the Lamb will be the extermination of the Reich.

Are You Giving the Last Man on the Job a Chance to Pass You?

Don't laugh at that green, ungainly looking but hardworking and always on the job fellow who has joined your force. In a few years you may be asking him for a job.

No; it is not at all impossible. There are thousands of such instances. You can think of some yourself.

That new chap may not be as nattily dressed as you are, he may not be as keen at repartee, he may not be a "fast stepper," but he may possess the characteristics by which he may climb fast while you slip back.

The time you spend enjoying yourself he may be using in study which will help him to advance.

One of these days there may be a change in the business and the young man of whom you are making sport may step into the high place.

Should that time come do not be so small as to say that he must have had some kind of "pull" or "that he was a fool who worked overtime and did everything he could to get a stand in." Maybe he did. You might have done the same. So shut up and take your medicine.

But do not let the next one get ahead of you.

A Recent Arrival.

A Scotsman, recently arrived, was chatting with a friend over conditions overseas, says The Toronto Mail and Empire. The new arrival told feelingly of the terrible toll of war upon the fair land of Scotland, the sad tale of young men killed and maimed, the sufferings of the families left behind. "Why, mon, we're just plum distract wi' it all," he concluded. "And, I suppose, the war has caused the price of provisions to go up in Scotland as well as everywhere else?" commented the questioner with sympathy. "Aye, mon, ye're richt," agreed the visitor. "Provisions has gone up in price four shillings a bottle the one sort and saxpence a quart the ither."

Food Laws Unheeded.

Londoners were amused at the unusual sight of a cormorant feeding below Chelsea Bridge, the other day. Interest in the bird was heightened by the scandalous way in which he was totally disregarding the food regulations. Speechless he doubtless would have been if faced with the fashionable question, "Comment vous Devonportez-vous?"

will have charge of—

(a) Matters relating to flour, bread, meat, fish, dairy products, canned and all manufactured food.

(b) Preparation of certain foods in order to encourage their use and to insure plentiful supplies.

The food distribution department will be divided into sections—

(a) To deal with purchase, prices, storage, transport, and sale of food for home consumption and export problems.

(b) To advise with British and foreign buyers.

(c) To advise with handlers and shippers.

The information and statistics department will have sub-divisions to—

(a) Gather statistics from Government departments and international sources, and tabulate them for the use of the other departments.

(b) Ascertain the quantity, location, ownership, and sources of food supplies for home consumption and for export.

The business department, in charge of the assistant chief of staff, will handle general office organization, accounting, finances, office supplies, and systematic filing of all data and correspondence.

The Educational Department will be responsible for the dissemination of general news for the information and instruction of the public, and the publication of all educational and other matters supplied to it by other departments.

The personnel of the national and provincial advisory committees, and the heads of the various departments will be announced shortly.

A New Departure.

Private property was commandeered for military purposes for the first time in the short history of the Dominion when the Military Hospitals Commission took over the Brant House on Burlington Beach and the cottages connected with it a few days ago to be used for hospital purposes. A convalescent home was needed, and the authorities could not secure it at short notice. Several efforts to arrange for the taking over of suitable premises had fallen through, so the Brant House was picked, and the owner received a paper to the effect that "His Majesty the King demands the property." Of course compensation will be paid to the proprietor, and in the meantime a choice convalescent home has been secured for the men.

Nothing Lost.

Officer—Hang it! you've brought the wrong boots. Can't you see one is black and the other brown?

Irish Batman—Sure, sor, but the other pair is just the same.

Irregularities of Time.

It is perhaps as well that we do not take the sun as our guide in the matter of time, for really it has no idea of punctuality. Only on four days a year does it come up to time, arriving at the meridian exactly at 12, and it can be as much as eighteen minutes late. Before astronomers decided to take no notice of its little "goings on" it was necessary to watch the sun every day to regulate your clock. The consequence was that the public clocks were hopelessly at variance, and Delambre says he heard the public clocks strike the same hour one after another for thirty minutes. That had at least one advantage—the unpunctual man could always keep his appointments by choosing his clock carefully.—London Chronicle.

—that is to say observing them so far as they do not interfere with a legitimate profit—Sir Joseph has fallen down on the eleventh. It may be said in extenuation that it wasn't his fault—he didn't find himself out—
the O'Connor report did it for him.
Even now Sir Joseph is not convinced that if he is found out he is lost.
On the contrary he not only explains that 5.06 cent gross profit per pound on bacon but gives it a moral sanction.

The explanations and moral sanctions of course extend to the discrepancy in taxes which he paid to the Dominion treasury. If Sir Joseph was right in paying war taxes on a half million profits then Mr. O'Connor is wrong in figuring that he should have paid war taxes on five millions. It is one gentleman's word against another.
In making your choice you will kindly remember that Mr. O'Connor has no bacon to sell.

Mr. O'Connor's figures deal with the export price of bacon. What the purchaser by the pound at home paid for bacon is another story. The impression Mr. O'Connor leaves on this subject is that the profits in the home market are not fit to print. Neither the O'Connor report nor Sir Joseph's full page ten-cent-a-line-come-back in the chief metropolitan newspaper deals with this aspect of the case.
Consequently we are entitled to believe the worst. Sir Joseph's nearest competitor in the export market managed to sell bacon at a little over three cents per pound gross profit.
The extra two cents which Sir Joseph made on his product was the reward of virtue. Sir Joseph puts it down to cheaper production but there is no doubt that Sir Joseph's piety has a great deal to do with it. There is no doubt that prayer is answered if Sir Joseph chooses to prey for two extra cents a pound why shouldn't he be answered as well as persons who are far less diligent in good works?

Such is the perversity of human nature that the O'Connor report is being read by most people in connection with The Message Sir Joseph was bursting with when he came back from England. That message as delivered to the Ottawa Canadian Club was that all true patriots should be ashamed to make money out of the British Empire's agony. "To hell with profits," said Sir Joseph and he wiped his streaming eyes. Yes, like another famous person in sacred history, Sir Joseph wept. Weeping is one of the best things Sir Joseph does. Under the stress of an emotion he does it readily and copiously and without the assistance of onions. At the time Sir Joseph wept and said
"To hell with profits" the O'Connor report was not extant. It was not even begun.

When Sir Joseph saw the O'Connor report in manuscript—being a friend of a section of the Borden Government—he always has a first look at these things—he did not like it and as a matter of fact wrote Mr. O'Connor a very abusive letter about it which Mr. O'Connor answered in a reasonable tone but did not go back on his conclusions. Rumor has it that Food Controller Hanna became inter-

his full page advertisement Sir Joseph took a milder tone but still displayed a certain amount of heat, mingled with aristocratic scorn of "government officials" who bring in reports which do not agree with Sir Joseph's view. As a baronet, Sir Joseph feels that these persons should be kept in their place. Sir Joseph also deplores the blow to a basic industry like agriculture which such a report must be and intimates that Mr. O'Connor is no political economist. Sir Joseph has a political economy shop of his own in Toronto University with Sir Robert Falconer behind the counter.

For the rest Sir Joseph made his argument on the difference between "margins" and gross profits which he says Mr. O'Connor did not take into account. Such a deft reasoner is Sir Joseph that if the argument had run another column he would probably have shown that instead of his making profits, the public was actually owing him money for bacon.

Everybody agrees that it was well that he stopped where he did otherwise there would have been no excuse for the investigation which he has demanded. Sir Joseph needn't even demand an investigation. All he has to do is to ask for it gently in his usual low soft sweet voice and he will get it on the jump.

report in manuscript—being a friend of a section of the Borden Government he always has a first look at these things—he did not like it and as a matter of fact wrote Mr. O'Connor a very abusive letter about it which Mr. O'Connor answered in a reasonable tone but did not go back on his conclusions. Rumor has it that Food Controller Hanna became interested at this juncture in the O'Connor report and suggested that it would be a fine thing to print. In fact Food Controller Hanna thought it was far too good a report to suppress. Food Controller Hanna, representing as he does Standard Oil which is a far more powerful interest than the William Davies Company, was not afraid of Sir Joseph Flavelle. So the cold storage part of the report was promptly published. It mysteriously fell into the hands of an Ottawa journalist who had been defeated a year ago in a municipal election by the high-cost-of-living interests and naturally he went to it with zest. This is the story of how a report, so detrimental to Sir Joseph Flavelle, the man whom the Borden Government delights to honor, came to be published.

The surprising thing to Sir Joseph—but not to those who have been watching the drift of public opinion—was the merely passive resistance that was put up to having the report made public. Somehow or other there seemed a disposition on everybody's part to let the people hear the worst about the great and good Sir Joseph and then hear what he had to say about it. The gentlemen who had made profits and who winced when Sir Joseph said to hell with them were glad so to speak that Joseph was now being discovered by his brethren and that he had nothing on them. The members of the cabinet, with the exception of Sir Thomas White, felt that it was almost impossible for anybody to be as good as Sir Joseph said he was and that it would be a good thing to be a considerable distance off when his reputation blew up. The Premier was sore at Sir Joseph conspiring with Sir Thomas to oust him from the premiership and, Bob Rogers, so the story goes, slapped Mr. O'Connor on the back and said "Go to it. We're all with you". In fact for such a great and good man Sir Joseph had mighty few friends on either side of politics.

Of course the Borden Government can't dissociate itself from the high-cost-of-living by kicking free of Sir Joseph after he has had his own way for three years. But it's revenge. Sir Joseph, as a public man falls like a thunder smitten oak. And a month or two later the Borden Government falls at a general election which shows that there is such a thing as a Government keeping too good company. In fact Sir Joseph is pious enough to ruin almost anybody. Nobody here is anxious about Sir Thomas White's political career. He is supposed to be Flavelle's man but there is nothing in Sir Thomas's past to warrant the belief that he will stick to the butcher baronet when he is going down. As long as they're going up Sir Thomas is with them—but when they start to toboggan Sir Thomas looks the other way.

Up to date Sir Joseph's come-back has not been very effective. It consists of a telegram to Sir Robert Borden and a full page advertisement in the daily papers. The advertisement was almost large enough to influence editorial opinion but of course it didn't. In his telegram which was characterized by more vehemence than argument, Sir Joseph came as near swearing as a pious man can. The remarks of his detractors he characterized as "flippant impudence". Our decision was greeted by wild yells and the discharge of pistols on the part of the rough element. The meeting broke up informally and in confusion. It would have been useless for the presiding officer to have attempted to dismiss court. The mob broke through en masse to congratulate the prisoners. Immediately the barkeepers were overwhelmed with work. Here and there I could see a small group of the honest men talking low voiced, with many shakes of the head. Johnny, Old and Cal, who had attended with his arm slung up, had their heads together in a corner. Danny Randall, who, it will be remembered, had not appeared publicly in any way, stood at his customary corner of the bar watching all that was going on. His gamblers were preparing to reopen the suspended games.

After conferring together a moment the three express messengers made ty-five years, tall, rather slender, with a clear face and laughing blue eyes. Nothing in his appearance indicated the desperado, and yet we had long known him as one of the Morton gang. This man now took up his residence in camp, and we soon discovered that he was evidently the killer. The first afternoon he picked some sort of a petty quarrel with Thompson over a purchase, but cooled down instantly when unexpectedly confronted by a half dozen miners who came in at the opportune moment. A few days afterward in the slack time of the afternoon Thompson, while drinking at the bar of the Empire and conversing with a friend, was approached by a well known sodden hanger-on of the saloons.

"What are you fellows talking about?" demanded this man impudently.

"None of your business," replied Thompson impatiently, for the man was a public nuisance and besides was deep in Thompson's debt.

The man broke into foul oaths.

"I'll dare you to fight!" he cried in a furious passion.

Facing about, Thompson saw Crawford standing attentively among the listeners and instantly comprehended the situation.

"You have the odds of me with a pistol," said Thompson, who notoriously had no skill with that weapon. "Why should I fight you?"

"Well, then," cried the man, "put up your fists! That'll show who is the best man!"

He snatched off his belt and laid it on the bar. Thompson did the same.

"Come on!" cried the challenger, backing away.

Thompson, thoroughly angry, reached over and slapped his antagonist. The latter promptly drew another revolver from beneath his coat, but before he could aim it Thompson jumped at his throat and disarmed him. At this moment Crawford interfered, apparently as peacemaker. Thompson was later told secretly by the barkeeper that the scheme was to lure him into a pistol fight in the street, when Crawford would be ready to shoot him as soon as the first shot was fired.

On the strength of this interference Crawford next pretended to friendship and spent much of his time at Thompson's store. Thompson was in no way deceived. This state of affairs continued for two days. It terminated in the following manner: Crawford, sitting half on the counter and talking with all the great charm of which he was master, led the subject to weapons.

"What do you mean by that?" he cried.

Danny Randall laughed in his gentle little fashion. I will confess that just at that time I was very decidedly wondering what Danny Randall was at. In fact, at moments I was strongly inclined to doubt his affiliations. He seemed to stand in an absolutely neutral position, inclining to neither side.

Tom Cleveland was killed in the open street by one of the Empire hangers-on. The man was promptly arrested by Morton in his capacity of sheriff and confined in chains. Morton as sheriff selected those who were to serve on the jury. I had the curiosity to attend the trial, expecting to assist at an uproarious farce. All the proceedings, on the contrary, were conducted with the greatest decorum and with minute attention to legal formalities. The assassin, however, was acquitted.

From that time the outrages increased in number and in boldness. No man known to be possessed of any quantity of gold was safe. It was dangerous to walk alone after dark, to hunt alone in the mountains, to live alone. Every man carried his treasure about with him everywhere he went. No man dared raise his voice in criticism of the ruling powers, for it was pretty generally understood that such criticism meant death.

This is a chapter I hate to write, and therefore I shall get it over with as soon as possible.

One Sunday in the middle of October two men trudged into town leading each a pack horse.

I was at the time talking to Barnes at his hotel and saw them from a distance hitching their animals outside Morton's. They stayed there for some time, then came out, unhitched their horses, led them as far as the Empire, hesitated, finally again tied the beasts and disappeared. In this manner they gradually worked along to the Bella Union, where at last I recognized them as McNally and Buck Barry, our comrades of the Porcupine. Of course I at once rushed over to see them.

I found them surrounded by a crowd to whom they were offering drinks free handed. Both were already pret-

The evening was lively, I was less it, and under the influence of my caution became hazy. When I at last made my way to my own camp, I found myself surprised to discover Yank huddled along by my side. I don't know he came with me, and I do not know he knew either. Probably a habit. At any rate, we left the four to sleep where they would. member we had some difficulty in getting places to lie.

CHAPTER XXIV.

The Last Straw.

THE sun was high when I awoke. We were not very fresh, to say the least, and we took some little time to get straightened around. I went down to the Morena cabin. I am not going to dwell on what I found there. All four of us had been killed with buckshot; the place ransacked from end to end; apparently the first volley had killed former partners and Senora as they lay. Morena had staggered his feet and halfway across the threshold.

The excitement caused by this foul crime was intense. Ever since that work. A great crowd assembled. Morton as sheriff was very bold threats were uttered by him as to the apprehension of the murderers. The temper of the crowd, however, was sullen. No man trusted his neighbor, and yet every breast swelled with implicit indignation at this wholesale provoked massacre. No clew was visible. Everybody remembered, of course, how broadcast and the fact of the gold had been established. Nobody dared utter his suspicions if he had any.

The victims were buried by a concourse that eddied and heaved and muttered long after they had been filled in. Vaguely it was that the condition of affairs was tolerable, but no one knew how to be remedied. Nothing definite was proved against any one, and believe that every honest man their way slowly across the room to the bar. I could not see exactly what happened, but heard the sudden reverberations of several pistol shots. The lamps and glasses rattled with the concussion, the white smoke of the discharges eddied and rose. An immediate dead silence fell, except for the sounds made by the movements of those seeking safe places. Johnny and his two friends, shoulder to shoulder, backed slowly away toward the door. The lamps and glasses rattled with the concussion, the white smoke of the discharges eddied and rose. An immediate dead silence fell, except for the sounds made by the movements of those seeking safe places. Johnny and his two friends, shoulder to shoulder, backed slowly away toward the door. Johnny and Old presented each two pistols at the group around the bar, while Cal, a revolver in his well hand, swept the muzzle slowly from side to side. Nobody near the bar stirred. The express messengers backed to the door.

"Keeps your heads inside," warned Johnny clearly. On the words they vanished.

Immediately pandemonium broke loose. The men along the bar immediately became very warlike, but none of those who brandished pistols tried to leave the building. From the swing and sway of the crowd and the babel of yells, oaths, threats and explanations I could make nothing. Danny Randall alone of all those in the room held his position unmoved. At last a clear way offered, so I went over to him.

"What's happened?" I shouted at him through the din.

Danny shrugged his shoulders. "They killed Carbart and Malone," Danny replied curtly.

Although for the moment held in check by the resolute front presented by these three boys, the rough element showed that it considered it had won a great victory and was now entitled to run the town. Members of the gang selected what goods they needed at any of the stores, making no pretense of payment. They swaggered boldly about the streets at all times, infested the better places, such as the Bella Union, elbowed aside insolently any inoffensive citizen who might be in their way and generally conducted themselves as though they owned the place. Robberies grew more frequent. The freighters were held up in broad daylight; rumors of returning miners being relieved of their dust drifted up from the lower country; mysterious disappearances increased in number. Hardly an attempt was made to conceal the fact that the organized gang that conducted these operations had its headquarters at Italian Bar. Strange men rode up in broad daylight, covered with red dust, to confer with Morton or one of the other resident blackguards. Mysteriously every desperado in the place began to lay fifty dollar octagonal slugs on the gaming tables, product of some lower country atrocity.

The camp soon had a concrete illustration of the opinion the roughs held of themselves. It was reported quietly among a few of us that several of our number had been "marked" by the desperadoes. Two of these were Joe Thompson, who had acted as counsel for the prosecution in the late trial, and Tom Cleveland, who had presided, and presided well, over the court. Thompson kept one of the stores, while Cleveland was proprietor of the butcher shop. No overt threats were made, but we understood that somehow these men were to be put out of the way. Of course they were at once warned.

CHAPTER XXIII.

The Rule of the Lawless.

AMONG the occasional visitors to camp was a man who called himself Harry Crawford. He was a man of perhaps twenty years, son of a store, Thompson had no way deceived. This state of affairs continued for two days. It terminated in the following manner: Crawford, sitting half on the counter and talking with all the great charm of which he was master, led the subject to weapons.

"This revolver of mine," said he, at the same time drawing the weapon from its holster, "is one of the old navy model. You don't often see them nowadays. It has a double lock." He cocked it as though to illustrate his point, and the muzzle, as though by accident, swept toward the other man. He looked up from his affected close examination to find that Thompson had also drawn his weapon and that the barrel was pointing uncompromisingly in his direction.

For a moment the two stared each other in the eye. Then Crawford sheathed his pistol with an oath.

"What do you mean by that?" he cried.

"I mean," said Thompson firmly, "that I do not intend you shall get the advantage of me. You know my opinion of you and your gang. I shall not be shot by any of you if I can help it."

Crawford withdrew quietly, but later in the day approached a big group of us, one of which was Thompson.

"There's a matter between you and me has got to be settled," he cried.

"Well, I can't imagine what it is," replied Thompson. "I'm not aware that I've said or done anything to you that needs settlement."

"You needn't laugh!" replied Crawford, with a string of insulting oaths. "You're a coward, and if you're anything of a man you will step out of doors and have this out."

"I am, as you say, a coward," replied Thompson quietly, "and I see no reason for going out of doors to fight you or anybody else."

After blustering and swearing for a few moments Crawford withdrew. He made no attempt to fight, nor do I believe his outburst had any other purpose than to establish the purely personal character of the quarrel between Thompson and himself. At any rate, Thompson was next morning found murdered in his bunk, while Crawford had disappeared. I do not know whether Crawford had killed him or not. I think not.

About this time formal printed notices of some sort of election were posted on the bulletin board at Morton's place. At least they were said to have been posted and were pointed out to all comers the day after election. Perhaps they were there all the time, as claimed, but nobody paid much attention to them. At any rate, we one day awoke to the fact that we were a full fledged community, with regularly constituted court officers, duly qualified officials, and a sheriff. The sheriff was Morton, and the most worthy judges were other members of his gang.

This move tickled Danny Randall's sense of humor immensely.

"That's good headwork," he said approvingly. "I didn't think Morton had it in him."

"It's time something was done to run that gang out of town," fumed Dr. Rankin.

"No; it is not time," denied Danny, "any more than it was time when you and Johnny and the rest of you had your celebrated jury trial."

"I'd like to know what you are driving," gradually worked along to the Bella Union, where at last I recognized them as McNally and Buck Barry, our comrades of the Porcupine. Of course I at once rushed over to see them.

I found them surrounded by a crowd to whom they were offering drinks free handed. Both were already pretty drunk, but they knew me as soon as I entered the door and surged toward me hands out.

"Well, well, well!" cried McNally delightedly. "And here's himself! And who'd have thought of seeing you here? I made sure you were in the valley and out of the country long since. And you're just in time. Make a name for it? Better call it whisky straight. Drink to us, my boy! Come, join my friends! We're all friends here! Come on, and here's to luck, the best luck ever! We've got two horse loads of gold out there—nothing but gold—and it all came from our old digging. You ought to have stayed. We had no trouble. Bagsby was an old fool!" All the time he was dragging me along by the arm toward the crowd at the bar. Barry maintained an air of owlish gravity.

"Where's Missouri Jones?" I inquired, but I might as well have asked the stone mountains. McNally chattered on, excited, his blue eyes dancing, bragging over and over about his two horse loads of gold.

The crowd took his whisky, laughed with him and tried shrewdly to pump him as to the location of his diggings. McNally gave them no satisfaction there, but even when most hilarious retained enough sense to put them off the track.

As will be imagined, I was most uneasy about the whole proceeding and tried quietly to draw the two men off.

"No, sir," cried McNally, "not any! Jes' struck town and am goin' to have a time!" in which determination he was cheered by all the bystanders. I did not know where to turn. Johnny was away on one of his trips, and Danny Randall was not to be found. Finally inspiration served me.

"Come down first and see Yank," I urged. "Poor old Yank is crippled and can't move."

That melted them at once. They untied their long suffering animals, and we staggered off down the trail.

On the way down I tried, but in vain, to arouse them to a sense of danger.

"You've let everybody in town know you have a lot of dust," I pointed out. McNally merely laughed recklessly.

"Good boys!" he cried. "Wouldn't harm a fly!" And I could veer him to no other point of view. Barry agreed to everything, very solemn and very owlish.

We descended on Yank like a storm. I will say that McNally at any time was irresistible and irrepressible, but especially so in his cups. We laughed ourselves sick that afternoon. The Morenas were enchanted. Under instructions, and amply supplied with dust, Morena went to town and returned with various bottles. Senora Morena cooked a fine supper. In the meantime I, as apparently the only responsible member of the party, unsaddled the animals and brought their burdens into the cabin. Although McNally's statement as to the loads consisting exclusively of gold was somewhat of an exaggeration, nevertheless the cantinas were very heavy. Not knowing what else to do with them, I thrust them under Yank's bunk.

concourse that eddied and he and muttered long after the had been filled in. Vaguely it was that the condition of affairs was tolerable, but no one knew how to be remedied. Nothing definite be proved against any one, and believe that every honest man to a moral certainty at least tains and instigators of the outrages. A leader could have an avenging mob, provided he have survived the necessary tests!

We scattered at last to our occupations. I was too much to work, so I returned to where was smoking over the fire. As near as I can remember, as one word since the discovery tragedy. On my approach he t pipe from his mouth.

"Don't know," said he, replacing pipe; then around the stem of was fond of those people."

"So was I," I agreed.

"Have you thought what a lulu cape you yourself had?"

Yank nodded. We sat for time in silence. My thoughts slowly and sullenly in a heavy potent anger. A small bird, plaintively from the thicket hand. Except for the tinkle little stream and the muffled distant river, this was the sound to strike across the dead silence of the autumn night. I sistedly did the bird utter its call that at last it aroused ev downcast attention, so that I red on it carelessly to Yank. H out of his brown study and raised head.

"It's no bird; it's a human," I after listening a moment. "T signal. Go see what it is. Junder out carelessly."

In the depths of the thicket a human figure crouched. It gl me, and I made out dimly the form of Pete, Barnes' negro from the hotel.

From the most inoffensive looking asked Dr. Rankin. He was leaning repeated, a little farther on. Then, as we neared the upper horse flat, we were stopped by a man who flashed a dark lantern in our faces, scrutinized us for a moment, shut off his light and told us to go forward.

We found a small fire behind a screen
of firs and around or near it the figures of a dozen men. They stood silent and scattered a little apart from the firelight. We could not make out their features. From time to time other men came in, singly or in couples, until probably twenty-five were gathered. Then ensued a few moments of waiting. A sudden stir proclaimed fresh arrivals, and four newcomers strode briskly to the fire. As the light fell on them I recognized Randall and the three express riders.

Danny kicked together the fire until it flared.

"Somebody put some more wood on this," he said in his natural voice.
"We've got to see each other."

CHAPTER XXV.

Rounding Up the Gang.

WITH the members of my committee I returned to our own camp, there to await the appointed hour of 7. This had been selected for several reasons—it was daylight, the roughs would be at home, and the community, although asleep, would not yet have gone to work. While waiting we cooked ourselves some hot coffee and made some flapjacks. The chill, gray time of day had come, the period of low vitality, and we shivered with the cold and with excitement. Nobody had much to say. We waited grimly for the time to pass.

About 6 o'clock Yank arose, seized his long rifle and departed for the log cabin that had been designated as the jail. His lameness had prevented him from being appointed on one of the arresting committees, but he had no intention of being left out. A half hour later we followed him into town:

Nothing definite could be done against any one, and yet I felt that every honest man knew moral certainty at least the cap and instigators of the various mobs. A leader could have raised a mob, provided he could survive the necessary ten min-

"What is there wrong?" he inquired.

"What is there wrong?" I replied. "What is there wrong?"

"I know," said he, replacing his gun around the stem of it, "I know of those people." "I was I," I agreed sincerely. "You thought what a lucky escape yourself had?"

"I nodded. We sat for a long while in silence. My thoughts turned and sullenly in a heavy, impenetrable. A small bird chirped from the thicket near at hand.

Except for the tinkle of our stream and the muffled roar of the distant river, this was the only sound to strike across the dead black of the autumn night. So per- y did the bird utter its single note at last it aroused even my attention, so that I remarked carelessly to Yank. He came his brown study and raised his

the depths of the thicket I found a figure crouched. It glided to and I made out dimly the squat of Pete, Barnes' negro slave, in the hotel.

"See, massa," whispered he, "dope you nevah would come."

"It is it, Pete?" I asked in the hushed tones.

"One got somefin' to tell you. I ketchin' a lil' bit of sleep e that white trash Moton's done heah dey all plannin' to warrant for to arres' Massa and Massa Pine and Massa or a-killin' dem men las' week, eah dem say dey gwine fer to n trial, and if dey fight dey lone shoot 'em."

He met them in his little room quite openly, which, as I have explained, was in accordance with his usual custom. He detailed the exact situation in a few words.

"Now," he ended, "we get busy. Are you in?"

Each assented, with apparent deep satisfaction.

"Now," said he briskly, "Munroe, you go to the lower trail, near the big oak at the second crossing. Wait there. If the express messengers have not passed by tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock return here. If they do come by stop them and tell them to proceed by the cut off to the place they know of and to wait there for me. Understand?"

To each of the other four men he assigned a different watching on other trails, giving them the same instructions.

"Now git!" he finished.

After informing Yank of my projected absence I waited at the appointed place until the appointed time, then returned to the Bella Union.

"That's all right," Danny greeted my report. "They came across the Hog's Back and are now safely in hiding. Here"—he gave me a slip of paper—

"during the day contrive to see these men. Make it casual and easy, as though you just happened to see them. Chat a few minutes and tell them this: 'Danny Randall calls a secret miners' meeting at the upper horse flat at 9 o'clock tonight. Slip up there without being seen.' Be sure to let them understand that it is I who am issuing the call. Get them to tell you whether they will or will not come."

I took the slip of paper and read over the half dozen names it contained. They were all known to me; so I nodded my comprehension and went out.

All the rest of the day I loafed about, chatting with dozens of people, among the others with Morton himself. That individual professed great zeal for law and order, and told of the wonderful things he, as sheriff, intended to accomplish. Among the lot I contrived to include the six men whose names were on my paper, and to deliver my message. I explained as far as I knew, and got from each a definite and emphatic promise to be present.

"It's time this thing was brought to a head," said one man. "If Danny Randall is taking hold of it I enlist."

I returned to report these facts, received an indifferent nod, and, under further instruction, went quietly to camp to await the agreed hour.

We started up the trail about 8 o'clock. Yank insisted that he was going, if he had to roll all the way, but after a little we simultaneously remembered that the Morenas had owned horses. One of these I caught, and on it Yank rode to the place of rendezvous.

The night was very black. After we had entered the woods its darkness seemed at first to hang in front of my eyes like a filmy curtain, so that I fairly groped, as one would when blindfolded.

At the Flat Rock we were halted by a low voiced command. I gave the password, as instructed by Danny in a moment the flames were leaping. I looked about me with considerable interest to see who of the camp had been summoned. I must confess to a few surprises, such as the gambler from the Empire, but in general the gathering consisted of those whom I should have characterized as solid citizens—Barnes, the hotel keeper; Himelwright and men of his stripe. They were all armed and all very grave and sober. Danny ran his eye over us one by one.

"Meeting come to order," he commanded briskly. "This is a vigilante meeting. I hope you all realize what that means. There are just thirty of us here, and Morton's gang is probably a hundred strong when it is all together. We cannot fight them, but we can give the honest, decent men of this camp a chance to fight them. I myself believe the honest men will back us and am willing to risk it. If any of you who are here now think differently say so."

He paused, but no one spoke up. "If anybody doesn't want to go into this now is the time to back out. Just keep your mouths shut; that is all."

He paused again, but again no one moved.

"That's all right," observed Danny, with satisfaction. He lifted a paper. "Listen to this: 'We, the undersigned, agree, as we are decent men, to stand by each other to the last, to avenge the death of any one of us and to obey the orders of our leaders. And if we fail in this, may God deny us mercy.' Boys," said Danny Randall earnestly, "this is serious. If we start this now we've got to see it through. We are not much on Bible oaths, any one of us, but we must promise. Frank Munroe, step forward!"

One by one Danny Randall called us forward and administered his simple oath. The fire leaped and with it the mighty shadows. Outside the circle of light the tall pines and fir trees watched us like a multitude standing witness. The men's faces were grave. There was about the roughest of them something noble, reflected from the earnest spirit of justice.

Randall had the plans all made, and he detailed them rapidly. We were to arrest four men only, and he named them—Morton, Scarface Charley, who had recovered; a gambler named Catlin and Jules, the proprietor of the Empire.

"Crawford is back in town," said some one.

"Make it five then," said Danny instantly.

Next came up the vital questions of ways and means. Many were in favor of a night surprise and an immediate hanging before the desperadoes could be organized for defense. Danny had a hard time showing them good reasons against this course, but at last he succeeded.

"This must be done deliberately and publicly," he maintained. "Otherwise it fails of its effect. We've got to show the gang that the camp is against them, and that won't be done by hanging some of them secretly."

"Suppose the camp doesn't back us up?" queried a miner.

"Remember your oath, gentlemen," was Danny's only reply to this.

It was decided at last that five committees should be appointed to arrest each of the five men, that the prisoners should be confined in a certain isolated log cabin and that the execution should take place in broad daylight.

his long rifle and departed for the log cabin that had been designated as the jail. His lameness had prevented him from being appointed on one of the arresting committees, but he had no intention of being left out. A half hour later we followed him into town.

It was a heavenly fall morning of the sort that only mountain California can produce. The camp was beginning to awaken to its normal activity. I remember wondering vaguely how it could be so calm and unconcerned. My heart was beating violently, and I had to clench my teeth tight to keep them from chattering. This was not fear, but a high tension of excitement. As we strolled past the Bella Union with what appearance of nonchalance we could muster Danny Randall nodded at us from the doorway. By this we knew that Catlin was to be found at his own place.

World's Wheat Supply.

The world's wheat-supply outside the territory controlled by the Central Powers, which no longer report crop yields, is, by any methods of calculation entirely unsatisfactory, though the exact condition of affairs is extremely difficult to set forth in figures. The year 1915 produced bumper grain crops all over the world. Measured against that year, the wheat crop of last season is 400,000,000 bushels short, and an actual shortage exists in every country in the world. The falling off of production in Argentina from 172,000,000 bushels to 77,000,000 fully accounts for the embargo which that country has placed on the export of the great bread grain. Canada's wheat crop of last season, as measured against the year before, shows a falling off of nearly one half, and the wheat crop of the United States to only a little over 600,000,000.

This bad showing is largely the result of comparing extremes, for while the yield of 1915 was decidedly high, that of last year was abnormally low. When last season's crops are compared with the average for the five years before the war, it is found to be fully 200,000,000 bushels short—an illustration of the fact that variations as high as twenty-five per cent. may be due to season alone. In France, however, the yield dropped off over twenty-nine per cent. for the high year 1915, and over thirty-two per cent. for last year.—Eugene Davenport, in The Atlantic.

A Fiendish Device.

Another fiendish war device which the vandalistic ingenuity of the Hun has devised is the "crow's claw" which is distributed to all the German soldiers in France for the purpose of strewing over the ground they are forced by the Allies to retreat from. The menacing claws stick up and penetrate the feet of the unfortunate horses, crippling them. Allied soldiers, too, suffer severe injuries from these hidden weapons which are made of iron and supplied in huge quantities. Captain N. M. Grace, of the Royal Army Medical Corps, whose home is in Renfrew, Ont., and who made the above statement, is now home on furlough.

POULTRY AND EGGS

MORE HENS NEEDED.

Farmers Should Keep on Hatching Chicks Until July.

The nation is confronted with a serious shortage of laying hens, and farmers should do their part in solving one phase of the food supply problem by hatching more chicks than usual this season, believes Ross M. Sherwood, acting head of the Kansas State Agricultural college poultry department.

Because of the high feed prices farmers sold hens last fall that ordinarily would have been retained for breeding purposes and egg production. The low egg production this spring has been

The days will soon be here when the midday sun can do a lot of damage to stock exposed to it. This is probably more the case with chicks than it is with grown fowls, but nevertheless, they all need it. Trees furnish the most cooling shade. Where trees are not available canopies should be erected, made by driving stakes in the ground and covering the top with burlap. The picture shows such a contrivance.

due to the shortage in laying stock and to the failure on the part of poultry raisers to feed their hens adequately.

Reports from the largest egg buyer in Kansas show that the egg production is from 20 to 40 per cent lower than it was a year ago, and last year's production was below normal. The government reports 38 per cent less eggs in cold storage on April 1 than at that time last year.

Give the laying hens more feed. They should have a good feed of grain at night and all the sour milk they can use during the day. The farmer should use the cheapest grain feed he has, whether corn, kafir or feterita.

It is too common a practice on the Kansas farms to let the hens shift for themselves during the spring and summer, or, at most, to throw them a little grain. Birds fed in this way seldom give a profitable production the following fall and winter. The most serious shortage will come next November, December and January, unless precautionary measures are taken.

Keep on hatching until the 1st of used either as broilers when they are about three months old, as friers or as roasters.

It is also most desirable as a precaution against disease to divide the available area into two plots. On one of these the chickens are allowed to range while a green crop—wheat or oats for example—is being grown for them on the other. The preliminary turning under the soil, the green crop and freedom from chickens for a period serve to prevent the land from becoming contaminated.

Additional range, with the advantage of a large supply of insect feed for the birds, may sometimes be obtained where a vegetable garden is maintained. At different times in the growing season there are areas in the garden which are either idle or occupied only by crops that the hens will not touch. The birds, confined from these with the aid of a portable fence, benefit without injury to the vegetables.

An important item to be considered by those thinking of maintaining a home flock is the cost of the house. For some part of the year at least in almost every section of the United States chickens require the shelter of a tight, dry building. In planning the house approximately four or five feet of floor space should be allowed for each bird. The height may be determined by the convenience of the operator, for the birds themselves need only two or three feet. Such low houses, however, are very difficult to clean and in consequence are likely to be neglected. It is better to build them so high that a man may work in them without discomfort.

A not uncommon device is to use a piano box for a chicken house. The cost of these houses depends largely upon circumstances, though no estimate can be given. It may be possible to find one the owner will be glad to give away, and, on the other hand, one may have to pay $1.50 or more for a box that is no better. By combining two piano boxes a very satisfactory shelter for a small flock can be made at little expense.

Culling the Poultry Flock.

The pullets to weed out are:

Those that are backward in growth or those that feather poorly. Such pullets are lacking in constitutional vigor.

Those that have deformities, such as crooked breast or backbone. Such pullets would make poor layers because the egg producing organs are often pushed out of shape and restricted for room.

MANKIND'S GREAT NEED IS MORE ANIMAL FOOD

Live Stock Raising and Its Relation to Cereal Byproducts.

By GEORGE W. WEBER in Weber's Weekly.

To continue to exist—that is the primordial demand of life. And to remain alive requires, first of all, subsistence—food. Clothing comes next, then shelter, then fuel. Science has gone far and wide in its study of human foodstuffs—to determine their relative values in dietetics. But, for the most part, this article has nothing to do with their conclusions, valuable as they are. More broadly, it will consider merely the relativity of the two great foodstuff elements, which are:

Products of the soil—grain, vegetables, fruits.

Animal foodstuffs—meats, fish, eggs, butter.

Live stock—domestic animals propagated for food—live upon substantially the same vegetable products which human beings consume and require. Inasmuch as man and animals eat the same sort of vegetable products there is an actual competition between them for such vegetable foodstuffs as may be derived from the soil. Man, being the stronger, dominates and controls the production and supply of vegetable food products. From each year's crop, first of all, he takes what he requires, feeds himself, and permits what is left to go to feed live stock. Thus, it appears, that our live stock—our meat supply resource—is dependent in large part upon what man, having fed himself, leaves of the annual products of the soil. Of course there is other vegetation which live stock can be fed upon—vegetable matter which man does not require and cannot eat.

Live stock can be maintained and, to some extent, prepared for market by grazing.

Live stock can be raised and made marketable by feeding upon the byproducts from cereal and other vegetable crops.

Waste of Feeding Stuffs.

When live stock is grazed upon lands which cannot profitably be tilled and made to produce cereals or vegetables such live stock is a clear profit and an addition to human food supplies. But where good conditioned, tillable land is abandoned to grazing there is likely to be a definite loss of vegetable foodstuffs and their byproducts. In other words, land in proper condition can be made to produce more foodstuff values by cultivation than by use as pasture. However, this does not mean that soil areas should not have rest—or, better still, refertilization such as is brought about by use of it for pasturing live stock.

If the byproducts—the forage—arising from cereal and vegetable crops are not made use of to feed live stock, then the stock will have to live off of what is left of the cereals after human requirements are fully supplied. Thus the live stock or meat supply, leaving grain. Birds fed in this way seldom give a profitable production the following fall and winter. The most serious shortage will come next November, December and January, unless precautionary measures are taken.

Keep on hatching until the 1st of July and have an abundance of young chicks to help bolster up the food shortage. Well fed chicks will weigh three pounds in fifteen to seventeen weeks, and this is a profitable time to put them on the market. It gives a larger carcass for food and is just as profitable for the farmer. A three pound chick will eat eight to ten pounds of feed in addition to what it picks up on the farm. There is money in them even at the high price of feed.

The pullets should be well fed so that they will be ready to lay before cold weather. Caution should be taken not to develop small breeds too early, for pullets laying before Sept. 15 are apt to molt in the fall and thus lose three months of egg production.

CHICKEN CHATTER.

Honesty is the surest foundation upon which to build a poultry plant.

The best medicine for poultry is good care. Cleanliness, light, warmth, dry houses, sound feed and pure water are better than the whole list of remedies.

Pullets hatched in the spring can be induced to lay more abundantly in the winter if they are properly fed, housed and handled.

Poultry is one of the most quickly produced and cheapest elements of the food supply.

Keep rubbish cleared up around the chicken coops, as rats always seek such places and are terribly destructive.

POULTRY IN BACK YARD.

With Proper Care a Small Flock Can Be Made Profitable.

[Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

From twelve to twenty-five hens are sufficient to provide the ordinary family with enough eggs and meat to render the keeping of the birds worth while. The amount of outdoor space the flock will require may be estimated at about twenty-five square feet for each bird. There are instances in which chickens have thrived with much less than this, but unless the soil is especially favorable and the birds receive unusually good care crowding is likely to prove unprofitable.

While it is possible to get along with twenty-five square feet per bird, a larger space affording more green and insect food is very desirable. For one thing, the ordinary poultry keeper wishes to perpetuate his flock, and the raising of young chickens requires as much land as the keeping of mature hens. After she is two years old the best laying days of the average hen are over, and it usually pays to get rid of her. This means that half the flock must be renewed each year. Since as many cockerels as pullets will be hatched and a certain percentage are certain to die, it is customary to hatch each year a few more chickens than there are hens in the flock. With a

Such pullets would make poor layers because the egg producing organs are often pushed out of shape and restricted for room. Those that are dull and listless and that show a disinclination to forage for part of their food.

Riviera, Grave and Gay.

The Riviera is something more than a geographical expression. It is a distinctly bounded state in the social atlas, a grand division in the Rand McNally of paper bound fiction, a region of romance, Russian dukes, international intrigue, society adventures, unconventional love affairs, starry skies, and deep blue waters, gambling, health resorts, and staggering hotel bills. It occupies a unique place in the world as the pleasure ground of all the dominant nations, where Europe goes when it has the price, and America when it feels socially ambitious.

The Riviera has a valid claim on all these distinctions. The skies are really starry, the Mediterranean is really blue, the titles of the Russian dukes are genuine, the size of the hotel bill leaves nothing to be desired. But there is something more to be found on that long stretch of southern coast, something besides wealth and fashion and the mingling of the real and the spurious in culture and aristocracy. Go east along the Riviera, leaving that part of it which lies in France behind, penetrate to the Italian Riviera, and you will find the same natural beauties less consciously exploited, more suited to the tastes of those who like their air and landscape undiluted with sophisticated diversion.

Leaving the section lying between Cannes and Mentone, where the gay life is concentrated, you come first, of course, to the Italian Riviera, and you will find the same natural beauties less consciously exploited, more suited to the tastes of those who like their air and landscape undiluted with sophisticated diversion. The Lead Pencil.

The lead pencil has a history extending over several hundred years, for it is claimed that a manuscript of Theophilus, attributed to the thirteenth century, shows evidence of having been ruled with something that might have been a black-lead pencil.

Rape For Sheep and Hogs.

Dwarf Essex rape is probably the premier forage crop for both sheep and swine. Successive crops can be planted and it will do well during any period of the summer. For early June pasture a mixture of one bushel of oats and five pounds of rape per acre is recommended by the Pennsylvania State college. Two or three weeks later a field may be seeded to rape alone at the rate of five to eight pounds per acre.

If the byproducts—the forage arising from cereal and vegetable crops are not made use of to feed live stock, then the stock will have to live off of what is left of the cereals after human requirements are fully supplied. Thus the live stock or meat supply, leaving out of consideration that which is produced solely by grazing on unutilizable lands, would represent each year's surplus cereal crop. And a year of short crops—years when the cereal surplus is small—would bring about the slaughtering of stock, reducing the number to be fed.

The possibilities of byproduct forage feeding are far-reaching, almost incalculable. The department of agriculture's report 112 has much to say concerning the values of such products. I have space to quote merely this:

"The animal husbandry division, in co-operation with the bureau of crop estimates, has made a study of feeding stuffs, in which it is shown that a tremendous waste of feeding stuffs occurs annually on American farms. The total loss to farmers from the waste of corn fodder and straw amounts to about $102,860,000 each year. . . . A nation wide campaign to teach the value and food unit values of all the more common feeding stuffs would be a great step toward a more perfect agricultural system."

Farmers Should Act.

The bureau's suggestion of a nation wide campaign is well and good, and such propaganda work may become advisable; but, individual farmers should not wait for such a movement. They now know. In fact, the individual farmer who begins on his own account to use all of the byproducts of his cropping hitherto wasted will make larger profits than if he wait until all other farmers are induced to do likewise. The farmer or live stock raiser who is not utilizing all of the byproducts of his farm is not only losing money, but he is working an injury upon all the people of the United States. The efficient farmer is the one who utilizes every bit of green stuff that grows on his place and, after he harvests his grain crops, takes the residue and stores it in such a manner that it does not lose its worth and then transforms this into meat by feeding it to live stock.

American Live Stock Problem.

The true test of the American live stock problem is, What do American live stock conditions show when compared with what they might be?

I have shown that the report of the animal husbandry division estimates that the annual loss in waste of straw and fodder amounts to more than a hundred million dollars. It is not practicable to discuss the intricate phases of live stock feeding in so brief an article as this. Hundreds of pages have China's Population.

Something near ninety-five per cent. of the population of China is confined to one-third of the area of the country, with a density of two hundred to the square mile. Five per cent. of the population inhabits sixty-five per cent. of the area, with a density of ten to the square mile. Lack of transportation facilities and the absence of adequate means of protection account for the sparseness of settlement in the outlying dependencies. About forty per cent. of China's population is in the provinces south of the Yangtze River, with a density of two hundred and thirty to the square mile.

will insist upon trying to make baby's stomach, day after day any amount of milk which it may swallow if nursed every minute. This constant nursing distends the stomach and causes vomiting, and colic, and baby cries with the colic, and of giving the tiny little stomach a chance to rest the mother returns the breast and wonders why it will not nurse, or, if it does, why it cries harder than if mothers would only learn frequent nursings only make worse and that often when screams it has had too much to eat.

Some babies are gluttons, as milk flows easily they swallow or overflow the stomach, and it is that the stomach contracts and the food is ejected. But vomit the milk almost unchewed soon as it is swallowed often being eaten too fast.

The mother's milk may be too rich and so the milk causes indigestion it may be eructated in the form of cheesy mass which is quite unpalatable. In case of the mother's milk being too rich the baby may be given a water from a bottle immediately nursing, thus diluting the milk to the mother's body. The mother on the other hand, may be too poor, and the baby may work very hard to get a very little nourishment.

The mother should remember babies, like all other human beings, require generous amounts of water. The baby should have freshly boiled water every day. At first it may be given a spoon, but later it may be given a bottle, preferably one with a mouth and a large, flat nipple, directly from this. This has advantages, for it trains the baby to drink the water and to drink bottle.

The baby should be held during nursing period so that it gets support and without strain to the mother. For this reason the baby should be held so that the foot of the baby is the easiest, correct position. The position of nursing should not be changed indefinitely. Keep the baby while the meal is in progress a little rest. Twenty minutes, each breast, is desirable with hourly feeding. Most babies thrive better if after the first months they are put on four feedings. Many doctors begin with this. Remember always to feed the baby when feeding time comes between the hours of 6 in the morning and 10 at night.

Almonds growing on the tree have hard green shells. If they are left to ripen naturally this shell bursts open and drops the fruit to the ground.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

BY JOHN W. S. McCULLOUGH, M.D., D.P.H., CHIEF OFFICER OF THE PROVINCIAL BOARD OF HEALTH.

CONSUMPTION.

JOHAN BROWN had noticed for some time that he was not up to the mark. In the morning he felt very well, but through the day he became tired, sleepy, and a little feverish. He had had a slight tickling cough for a month or two, but did not cough up anything.

One afternoon he felt a warmth behind his breastbone, and at the same time he had a salty taste in his mouth. Following a tickling in his throat he coughed and brought up a few teaspoonfuls of bright red blood.

This alarmed his friends very much, and he turned pale, his hands were cold and perspiration broke out on his forehead. His mother sent for the doctor, who examined his nose, throat, and chest, and finally told him the blood came from his chest. He was placed in bed and told to keep quiet and that he need not have any fear for the bleeding. The physician took a sample of the material that John coughed up and found, as he suspected, that he was suffering from tuberculosis of the lungs.

CONSUMPTION AND SPITTING BLOOD

Consumption is the cause of spitting of blood in nine cases out of ten.
Other causes are pneumonia, congestion, bronchitis, heart disease, aneurism, menstrual trouble, and scurvy. One out of every twenty-five cases of consumption starts with a slight hemorrhage. In one out of every six cases there is no other symptom. In two out of every three cases there is nothing to bring on a hemorrhage. The patient when quiet notices a salty taste, has a little tickling, coughs, and up comes the blood.

These early hemorrhages are never fatal. But the appearance of blood frightens most people, and perhaps it is a good thing to have the hemorrhage, because it is a reliable danger signal.

A patient of this kind should be kept quiet in bed for a few days. He usually needs no medicine, except in cases where he is very much frightened or shocked, when the doctor may give him some sedative. He must not get stimulants such as whiskey, aromatic spirits of ammonia, etc. If the side from which he is bleeding can be distinguished he should lie on that side.

If there is no return of hemorrhage after a few days he may get out in the open air. Horseback riding will be good exercise for him, and he may do a little outdoor work. Outdoor air and good food are the requisites for cure.

Above all things, a patient who has had a slight hemorrhage—and every other consumptive—should avoid the use of the numerous advertised
"Cures for Consumption." None of them are of any value in the treatment of this disease; some of them are positively harmful.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Answers to questions pertinent to public health will from time to time be made in this column. The questions should be short and to the point.
If it is not advisable to reply through this column, answer will be made by letter if stamped envelope is enclosed.

1.—Responsibility in cases of Communicable Diseases. A.A.G., Port Colborne.

Q.—In a case of scarlet fever or other contagious disease is the local board of health obliged to take care of the patient, provide nurses, doctors, and medicine?

A.—The Public Health Act, Section 58, Sub-Section 1 and 2, refers to this question as follows:—

"58.—(1) If any person coming from abroad, or residing in any municipality within Ontario, is infected, or has recently been infected with,
or exposed to, any communicable disease to which this section is by the Regulations made applicable, the medical officer of health or local board shall make effective provision for the public safety by removing such person to a separate house, or by otherwise isolating him, and by providing medical attendance, medicine, nurses, and other assistance and necessities for him.

ISOLATION OF INFECTED PERSONS

(2) The corporation of the municipality shall be entitled to recover from such person the amount expended in providing such medical attendance, medicine, nurses, and other assistance and necessaries for him, but not the expenditure incurred in providing a separate house or in otherwise isolating him.
2 Geo. V. c.58, s.58."

The communicable diseases referred to in this sections are: Smallpox, scarlet fever, diphtheria, chicken-pox, whooping-cough, measles, typhoid fever, cholera, bubonic plague, leprosy, epidemic anterior-polio-myelitis, and epidemic cerebro-spinal meningitis.

Canape.—Always a relish or first course at the beginning of a meal, but consisting of a slice of bread or cracker, on which some piquant, spicy butter or mixture is placed, as ham or caviar, tomato, etc.

Souffle.—Always a hot dish in which egg whites are folded in just previous to baking, making the dish very light; generally cooked in outside dish of water, as cheese, prune, corn souffle.

Junket.—Sweet milk dish, which has been solidified by the use of rennet, a digestive extract from the stomach of a sheep or calf.

Fry.—To immerse in boiling or hot fat of several inches depth; rightly used when speaking of doughnuts, fritters, etc.

Saute.—To cook in very little fat or in a greased pan; rightly used when speaking of cooking eggplant, steak, mushrooms and other foods which are first browned on one side, then turned on the other, and which are wrongly spoken of as "fried."

Macedoine.—A mixture of finely cut fruits or vegetables prepared in jelly.

Soy.—A sauce prepared by the Japanese from the seeds of a leguminous plant; brown, flavorful, used to color and season other dishes.

A la Newburg.—The style of serving any food in a rich white sauce to which egg yolks are added, as lobster, mushrooms, etc., a la Newburg.

Conserve.—A thick, very sweet saute of fruit, as cherry conserve, to be eaten as relish with meat; interchangeable term with "preserve."

Compote.—Stewed fruit, generally whole, in a sweet sirup; as apple, pear or fig compote. Continental term for our popular one of "sauce" when applied to fruits.

"Charlotte."—A dish of fruit or cream filled into a mold lined with cake, generally sponge cake; generally served cold.

"Betty."—A dish of fruit and bread-crumbs filled in alternately and baked; generally served hot.

Nurse Received Decoration.

Just a year ago last Christmas Eve a little band of nurses left Toronto under the charge of Miss Helen McMurrich to join the French Flag Corps. Instituted to provide trained British nurses for strengthening French hospitals, no nursing division calls for more bravery or sacrifice, for the stipend of such is $208 a year, and their work is carried on so near the firing line that it is never permitted to name the place where they are located. Among those French Flag nurses that left Toronto was Madeleine Jaffray, of Galt, daughter of Mr. J. P. Jaffray, Canadian Government agent at Philadelphia. And to Miss Madeleine Jaffray has fallen the proud honor of being the first Canadian nurse to receive the great Croix de Guerre of France. For on the 4th of June, while on duty at a moveable hospital next to the very firing line, the Germans shelled the hospital, and Miss Jaffray was wounded in the foot. So full of admiration at her courage were the French that all the generals of the division visited her, and just three days later she received the wonderful Croix de Guerre.

Potato Chop.

Chop fine the whites of four hard boiled eggs and add to two coffee cups of cold boiled potatoes chopped rather fine. When well tossed together add a cupful of broken English walnuts or hickory nuts and the smallest sized bottle of stuffed olives cut in bits. Season all to taste with onion juice (obtained by rubbing the onion over a grater), salt and pepper. Melt half a coffee cupful of butter, add to it the juice of half a lemon and mix thoroughly with the potato mixture. Arrange on a platter and grate over the top the four egg yolks, arranging as a narrow green border around the edge about three tablespoonfuls of chopped parsley.

Don'ts For Mothers.

A writer in a recent issue of Mother's Magazine gives some very pertinent advice to mothers in regard to their attitude with their children. She says in part: "Don't think that the moment you are alone with your boy or girl you must find fault or endeavor to improve the occasion by a little moralizing, no matter in how loving a spirit. This is a hard don't, for no one is so anxious to help a child toward perfection as is the parent, yet it surely leads to an avoidance of the moments alone together, which should be times of happy confidences.

"Neither should a parent correct the child before others. Never mind if a well meaning relative does say, 'My dear, I am surprised that you do not show more force of character; your children are suffering from a lack of discipline.' Pass the matter over till you and the small offender can have it out alone. If the circumstances are such that it cannot be passed over take him out of the room."

Saving Gas.

A gas saver and comfort in cooking on gas stoves is to place a sheet of zinc or sheet iron on top of the stove the size of the stove top. One lighted burner will heat the entire sheet and serve to cook as many articles of food as there is room for vessels. It also is cleanly, protecting the stove from the results of boiling over, and the sheet is much easier cleaned than the several burners are when not so protected.

The Handy Girl.

There are some girls who have a perfect knack of fashioning the daintiest accessories from apparently nothing save a few scraps of material and a yard or two of lace. One of the most fascinating little negligees was made by a clever girl who had on hand an unusually large supply of handkerchiefs. Four of these bits of linen were joined together with strips of lace and an edging was run around the whole thing. An opening was left in the square, where two handkerchiefs met, and lace was sewed on each side instead of joining with one piece. Nil green ribbon was used to tie at the neck and under the arms, and the result was a cunning little negligee.

Haggerty-Herrington.

A quiet but very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon, Aug. 8th, 1917, at the Methodist Parsonage, Selby, when Miss Anna Gertrude, second eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Herrington, was united in marriage to Mr. James Haggerty, youngest son of Mrs. Hugh Haggerty, Empey Hill. The ceremony being conducted by the Rev. E. B. Cooke. The bride presented a particularly attractive appearance gowned in white silk with hat to match. On their return from an extended trip the young couple will reside on the Haggerty homestead at Empey Hill and will have the good wishes of their many friends.

WEDDING AT ODESSA.

A pretty wedding took place on Saturday, Aug. 4th, at 10 a.m., at the home of Lieut.-Col. and Mrs. Clyde, Odessa, when their eldest daughter, Myrtle Edna, was united in marriage to Herbert Crosby Kendall, Oakville. The bride, dressed in a suit of light grey taffeta silk, with pale pink georgette crepe blouse, carrying a bouquet of roses and maidenhair fern, entered the prettily decorated parlor on the arm of her father. Rev. C. de Courcy Rayner, pastor of Bethel Congregational Church, Kingston, performed the ceremony, after which a wedding breakfast was served. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present. About 11.45 a.m., Mr. and Mrs. Kendall motored to Kingston, amid a shower of confetti and good wishes, and left on the east bound G.T.R. train for Montreal, where they will reside. A beautiful collection of wedding present attested to the popularity of both young people.

THE LATE ROBERT WRIGHT.

On Wednesday last the death occurred in Benton Harbor, Mich. Robert Wright, formerly a well-known resident of Odessa. The late Wright was born in Nova Scotia sixty-eight years ago, and for twenty years plied the trade of chair manufacturer in Odessa. About two years ago he moved out west, where he passed away. Deceased was a Liberal in politics. He is survived by sons, H. F. James I., and William, and two daughters, Ellen and mine, all of Odessa.

HARVESTERS READ THIS!

The best way to the harvest of Western Canada is by the Canadian Northern Railway. Special trains will be operated from Toronto to Winnipeg on excursion dates. Equipment will consist of electric lighted colonist cars and lunch cars especially designed to cater to the needs of large bodies of men at moderate rates. West of Winnipeg the demand for labor is great. The lines of the Canadian Northern Railway and the wages are correspondingly high. All particulars R. E. McLEAN, station agent; McLAUGHLIN, town agent; or General Passenger Depts., Montreal, and Toronto, Ont.

HOME CANNING.

The Best Methods of canning tables and Fruits, demonstrated by Miss Gray of the Ontario Dept. of Agriculture in the Town Hall week, proved to be very instructive to the experienced housewife, as well as to the amateur.

The carrots, peas, beans, beets, tomatoes looked so attractive in glass sealers, everyone went home enthusiastic to add them to their stores.

When the weather moderates at busy season of canning and preserving is over, the Food Resource Committee are arranging for a competent instructor to demonstrate the method of doing up chickens and meats which can be sent to the trenches as well as saved for our own use.

Following a ruling Saturday a man has no right to take into any private house but his Magistrate Jelfs fined John Taylor Rebecca street, Hamilton, the sum $500 or four months in jail for violating the temperance act.
